'I'm reluctant to get on a plane now'

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Richard Ojankangas says it doesn't bother him.

Not any more anyway.

He has never had a nightmare about it, he says, and neither has his son. No, he never even thinks about it, except occasionally when he sees a headline about an air tragedy somewhere else.

And yet, it is etched in his mind. He can recall details as sharply as if it had happened yesterday rather than 4½ years ago.

He and his son Greg were relaxing in their seats as the North Central jet taxied down the O'Hare runway. It was Dec. 20, 1972, and the holiday air was dark.

As the plane began to lift off the ground, he was pushed back deeply into his seat, and he turned to look at Greg.

"Gee, this is a steep takeoff," he said.

There was a loud rumble, and his immediate reaction was that the pilot had put too much stress on the engine. The plane bounced back to the ground. Ojankangas didn't even know that it had collided with a Delta airliner, and he remembers the North Central landed softly when it came back down.

ALL THE passengers had their heads down. Ojankangas was sitting in row eight. It is a trivia he will never forget. He looked out his window, and the snow carried a wet, glossy reflection of flames dancing off the wing.

At first the reaction inside was calm, Ojankangas recalls. As the plane came to a halt, the passengers methodically loosened their seat belts and stood up. Then, the lights went out and the smoke began pouring in.

"We thought that there was no way we'd get out alive," he says and his voice begins to rise. "People weren't moving out and it got so you couldn't breathe, and people were not moving."

He knew there'd be more air on the floor, but he didn't want to get down because he was afraid he'd be trampled.

Ojankangas looked to his small window again. They don't break, and his mind told him they don't break. Still, he raised his fist and brought it down hard against the glass.

It did no good.

OJANKANGAS IS a professor at the University of Minnesota in Duluth. His work demands a good deal of air traveling, and he says he has no qualms about getting on a plane again.

"I'm more nervous; I pay more attention to it," he says, but he flies a lot, and the only precaution he takes is to try to sit close to the emergency exits.

But he concedes many other survivors of air crashes do not have as easy a time of it. He met a salesman on that plane whose work took him across the country, and the salesman couldn't bring himself to get on a plane again.

"He said, 'I've got to work and I

7-nation summit agrees to push for more jobs

by JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI) — President Carter and leaders of six other wealthy free world nations Sunday agreed to gear their economies to the "most urgent task" of producing more jobs without pushing prices higher.

The heads of the seven industrial democracies said the problem of unemployment is particularly acute among young people.

"We have agreed that there will be an exchange of experience and ideas on providing the young with job opportunities," they said in a final "message of confidence" ending a two-day economic summit meeting.

The final declaration also called for increasing nuclear energy but, at the same time, reducing the risks of nuclear proliferation and pledged more aid to Third World countries and called for the Communist bloc to "do the same."

THEY SAID THE job-producing effort by governments must be controlled so as not to produce higher inflation rates.

"Our most urgent task is to create more jobs while continuing to reduce inflation," they said. "Inflation does not reduce unemployment. On the contrary, it is one of its major causes."

There are an estimated 15 milliion unemployed persons in the seven nations represented at the summit held at No. 10 Downing Street, the official residence of British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Carter, who was participating in his first international economic conference, said the seven heads of government would make good on their promises.

"We have obligations to fulfill and in many ways our reputations are at stake to carry out the promises we made this afternoon," Carter said.

In his statement, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said the "Downing Street summit is a success . . . for our industrial democracies."

Following the summit, Carter prepared to fly to Geneva for talks on the Middle East with Syrian President Hafez Assad Monday. He returns to London for a 15-nation NATO meeting Tuesday and then returns to Washington.

IN ADDITION TO the joint action against unemployment and inflation, the seven leaders also agreed to:

- Stick "to stated economic growth targets or to stabilization policies" that are noninflationary and would reduce imbalances in international payments.
- Seek additional resources for the International Monetary Fund and support "linkage of its lending practices to the adoption of appropriate stabilization policies.
- Expand opportunities for trade, to reject protectionism as fostering unemployment and higher prices and to give a new impetus this year to the Tokyo round of trade negotiations which have been stalled for three years.
- "Conserve energy and increase and diversify energy production, so that we reduce our dependence" on foreign oil that has created a $45 bil-

Ridge extension protest seen for Tuesday meet

Objections from citizens, Northwest Community Hospital and Park School PTA are expected Tuesday when village officials present plans for extending Ridge Avenue through the hospital property.

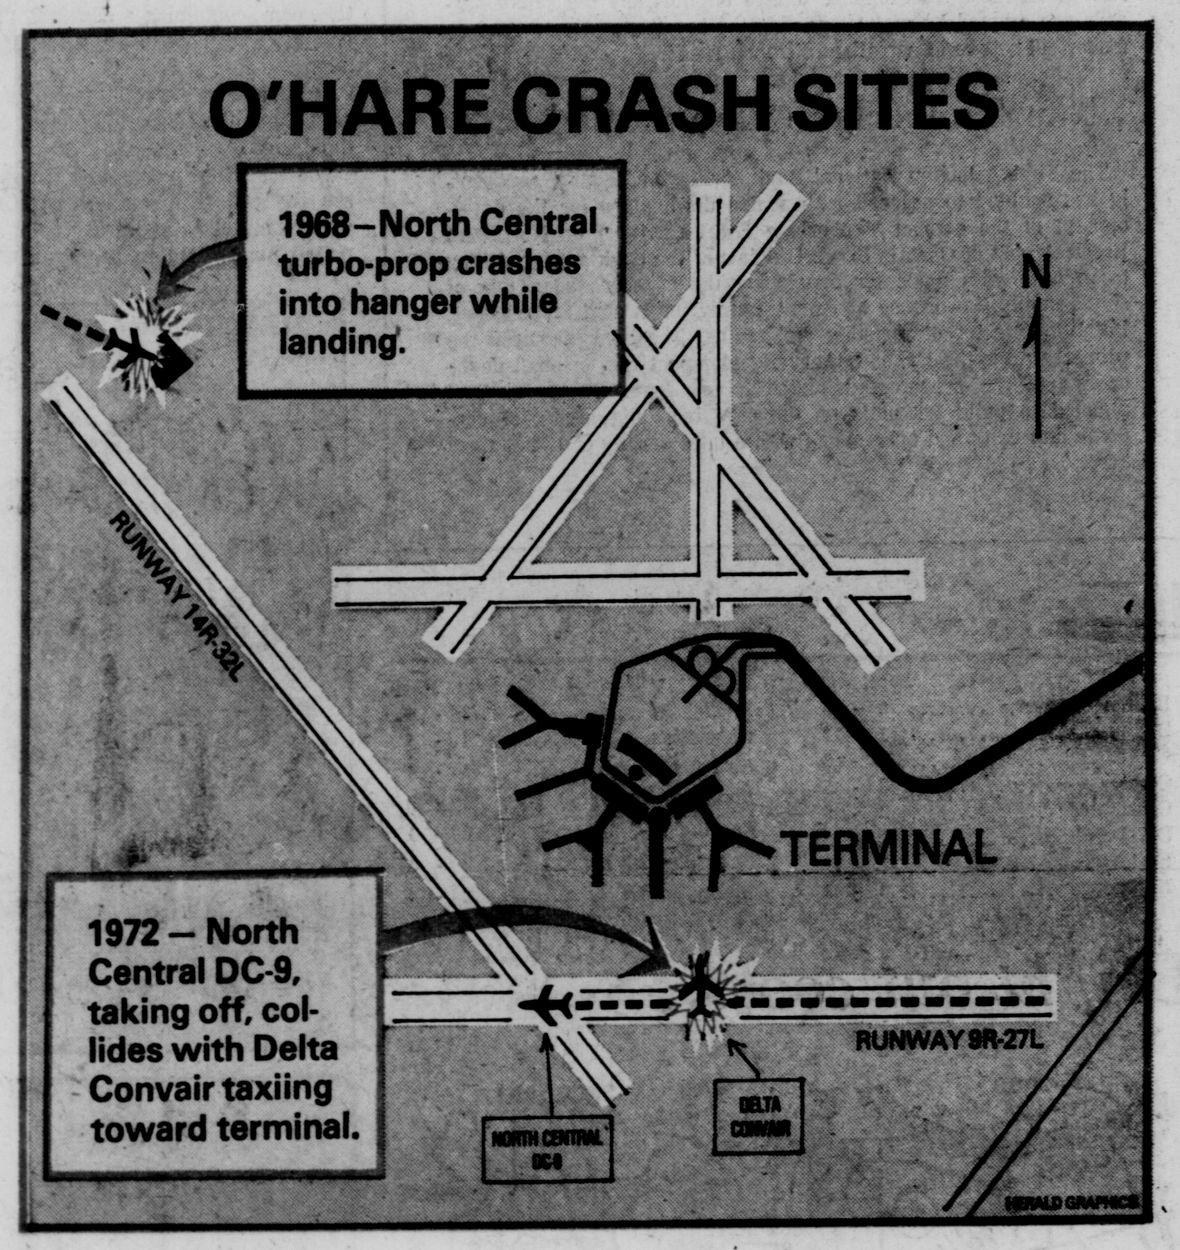

Village officials say the realignment of the private road east of the hospital with Ridge Avenue is needed because of safety hazards created by the current alignment, but hospital officials say the change would prohibit expansion of the hospital and residents fear traffic on Ridge Avenue will more than double.

The safety hazards are created by motorists using the hospital's private road as a shortcut between Central and Kirchoff roads, village officials

First of two parts.

The North Central Airlines flight from Milwaukee to Chicago approached O'Hare Field Runway 14 — Right on line for the routine landing.

Touchdown would be coming within the next 12 seconds, ending the last leg of the converted turbo-prop jet's journey from Minnesota to Wisconsin to Illinois on this foggy Dec. 27, 1968 night.

In a few moments, Rebecca Beasley, a social worker in Indianapolis, would have alighted with the plane's 44 other passengers into the misty Chicago evening.

A 1,000 feet away the same seconds counted away the rehearsal time for the members of the Vanguard drum and bugle corps from Des Plaines practicing in a Braniff Airways hangar.

None had a warning of the disaster the next 30 seconds would bring.

WITHIN A MERE half minute and within 3500 feet of the runway, the aircraft suddenly began to veer leftward, then climbed at a declining airspeed for about 12 seconds before a futile thrust of full power was made, careening the plane further leftward and reducing airspeed even more.

In the next nine seconds the plane stalled completely, rolled over and crashed into the Braniff hangar, taking the lives of 27, and injuring another 26, including Miss Beasley, who was left permanently paralyzed.

Some 16 months later, a Cook County Circuit Court jury found the airlines liable for the crash and awarded Miss Beasley $1 million in damages.

Miss Beasley's attorney was reknowned Chicago lawyer John J. Kennelly, one of the nation's foremost air litigation counselors. Kennelly spent 14 months preparing for the case, proving to a jury that the crash was induced apparently when a test circuit was inadvertently switched on, feeding false information to the plane's automated landing system.

THE TRAGEDY OF that error was stunning. But for the survivors and families of victims, it was to be followed by months of legal round-robin, the kind that commonly ensues air disasters.

That a dollar figure can be placed on a life might seem coldly impersonal, yet in the realm of personal injury litigation, that is essentially the only legal alternative available to air crash survivors and the families of victims.

That the alternative means years of prolonging the grief is perhaps a more bitter reality.

The 1968 North Central crash was typical of most air disaster litigation.

Claims from 30 persons were filed following the crash, all of which were consolidated into one action. Settlement came in less than two years, a relatively short time.

IN CONTRAST was the Dec. 20, 1972 O'Hare collision between another North Central plane and a Delta Airlines craft. For some victims of that mishap, the legal battles are still alive.

The four-year timespan is long, but it is not necessarily unusual, lawyers say.

PR stresses flying safety

by LYNN ASINOF

Most people know the old saying that it is safer to fly than to cross the street, but no one really believes it.

Even the cold hard facts won't convince most people. That's why airlines bend over backwards to avoid bad publicity on air safety.

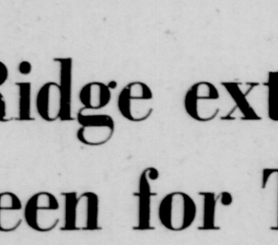

For example, most accident claims are settled out of court to avoid public attention. Airlines often even cancel their advertising campaigns after a big crash, whether they are involved or not.

THE STATISTICS, however, show that air travel is just about the safest way of getting around. The National Transportation Safety Board figures show that more people die in railroad and bicycle accidents than in airline crashes.

Only 124 people died in accidents on United States airlines in 1975, a miniscule rate considering that the airlines flew more than 2.4 billion miles. By comparison, 564 people were killed in railroad accidents and 900 people were killed in bicycle accidents.

Ax-toting flight attendant foils attempted skyjack

TOKYO (UPI) — An American held a razor to the throat of a female passenger Sunday and ordered a Northwest Orient Airlines jumbo jet flown to Moscow but a flight attendant foiled the attempted skyjack by knocking the man out with a fire ax.

The Boeing 747 jetliner, over the Pacific Ocean en route to Honolulu, returned to Tokyo's Haneda airport where the American, identified as Bruce Kohl Trayer, 25, of Wisconsin, was arrested and hospitalized with a 2½- inch cut on his head.

Police reported no injuries among 251 passengers and a crew of 15, although a 69-year-old American woman passenger suffered heart trouble and was hospitalized in Tokyo.

POLICE SAID TRAYER, who had a ticket for Chicago, seized a Japanese woman passenger identified as Mieko Sekine about an hour after the plane, Northwest's flight 22 bound for Honolulu, Los Angeles, and Minneapolis, left Tokyo. He held a straight razor to her throat and ordered the pilot to fly to Moscow.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Washington said the pilot of jet, Capt. Homer Sutter, then radioed the Tokyo Air Traffic Control tower and "advised of the hijacking situation and requested coordinates to Moscow."

However, police said, a cabin attendant assigned to the first class section struck Trayer with a fire ax as the hijacker walked toward the cockpit with the hostage and knocked him unconscious.

The pilot decided to return to Tokyo on advice from a doctor on board who examined Trayer's injury. Trayer, who had regained consciousness, was arrested when the plane arrived at Tokyo International Airport, police said. With a white bandage around his head and wearing handcuffs, he was taken to a hospital where police began questioning him.

Police said Trayer might be turned over to U. S. authorities since the hijack occurred outside Japanese territory and on board an American airliner.

Man, 20, killed in car, cycle crash

A Bensenville man was killed and a passenger on his motorcycle was seriously injured Sunday afternoon when their motorcycle collided wth a car near Elk Grove Village. Steve Esposito, 20, was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center after his motorcycle collided with a car driven by Debbie Nicholas, 18, of 91 E. Millers Rd., Des Plaines, at 1:45 p.m. Sunday on Higgins Road west of Arlington Heights Road, authorities said. Janet Nystron, 28, Bensenville, a passenger on the motorcycle, received cuts and a compound fracture of her right leg. Ms. Nystron was taken to Alexian Brothers, where she was reported in serious condition in the hospital's intensive-care unit Sunday night. Ms. Nicholas also was taken to the hospital for treatment of possible shock and was released.

Ridge extension protest expected

Citizens, Northwest Community Hospital and Park School PTA are expected to oppose plans for extending Ridge Avenue through hospital property in Arlington Heights. Village officials, who will present the plans Tuesday, say the realignment of the private road east of the hospital with Ridge Avenue is needed because it is a safety hazard. Hospital officials say the change would prohibit expansion of the hospital and residents fear traffic on Ridge Avenue would more than double. Village officials say the safety hazards are created by motorists using the hospital's private road as a shortcut between Central and Kirchoff roads.

New Timberlake plan mulled

The First Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights, apparently has decided to proceed with scaled down plans for the development of the defunct Timberlake Estates project on Northwest Highway east of Quentin Road. Officials of the bank appear willing to proceed with plans for developing the 23 acres as a mix of single-family. townhouse and multi-family units, said Steve Lenet, Palatine director of planning and zoning. The bank acquired the property after the Canna-Lowery Development Co., original developers of the property, defaulted on its loan. Developers had planned to build 198 units on the site, including a mix of condominium units and apartments with a total density of 17 units per acre.

Andy Williams, kids pay visit to jailed Claudine

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — French-born singer Claudine Longet, dressed in the white coveralls of a prisoner, received Mother's Day hugs from her three children and former husband Andy Williams in the stark booking room of Pitkin County Jail.

While other mothers were escorted Sunday to church and dinner, the former Las Vegas showgirl waited in her cell for Noelle, 13, Christian, 11, and Bobby, 7. She received no flowers or gifts.

A spokesman said her only other visitor was a Roman Catholic clergyman and that she spent the rest of the day reading and listening to the radio.

MISS LONGET, 36, was convicted of criminally negligent homicide in the March 1976 shooting death of her lover, professional skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich. She was denied her bid to the Colorado Supreme Court to be released from jail in time for Mother's Day.

Deputy Sheriff Gary White said Sunday's meeting was held in the 10-by 12-foot booking area "where visitors always meet the prisoners." He said the room, containing a desk and plain chairs, was devoid of painting or plants.

Williams and the children had a private visit of about 25 minutes, said the deputy.

White said the youngsters could not see the cell their mother beautified with blue, yellow and green paint and potted plants sent to her by friends.

Claudine Longet

He said the cell was through two doors, down a hallway and around a corner from the booking room of the 90-year-old jail.

MISS LONGET began serving a 30-day term April 18.

Defense attorney Ron Austin argued to the state Supreme Court Friday that Miss Longet should have been released Saturday because she was a "model prisoner" and was allowed 10 days' "good time" privileges.

The justices unanimously ruled the 30-day jail term was a condition of probation set by District Court Judge George Lohr and not subject to trusteeship provisions of Colorado law.

Miss Longet faces two years of supervised probation following completion of the jail term May 15.

Man, 20, killed in car, cycle crash

A Bensenville man was killed and a passenger on his motorcycle was seriously injured Sunday afternoon when their motorcycle collided wth a car near Elk Grove Village. Steve Esposito, 20, was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center after his motorcycle collided with a car driven by Debbie Nicholas, 18, of 91 E. Millers Rd., Des Plaines, at 1:45 p.m. Sunday on Higgins Road west of Arlington Heights Road, authorities said. Janet Nystron, 28, Bensenville, a passenger on the motorcycle, received cuts and a compound fracture of her right leg. Ms. Nystron was taken to Alexian Brothers, where she was reported in serious condition in the hospital's intensive-care unit Sunday night. Ms. Nicholas also was taken to the hospital for treatment of possible shock and was released.

Ridge extension protest expected

Citizens, Northwest Community Hospital and Park School PTA are expected to oppose plans for extending Ridge Avenue through hospital property in Arlington Heights. Village officials, who will present the plans Tuesday, say the realignment of the private road east of the hospital with Ridge Avenue is needed because it is a safety hazard. Hospital officials say the change would prohibit expansion of the hospital and residents fear traffic on Ridge Avenue would more than double. Village officials say the safety hazards are created by motorists using the hospital's private road as a shortcut between Central and Kirchoff roads.

New Timberlake plan mulled

The First Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights, apparently has decided to proceed with scaled down plans for the development of the defunct Timberlake Estates project on Northwest Highway east of Quentin Road. Officials of the bank appear willing to proceed with plans for developing the 23 acres as a mix of single-family. townhouse and multi-family units, said Steve Lenet, Palatine director of planning and zoning. The bank acquired the property after the Canna-Lowery Development Co., original developers of the property, defaulted on its loan. Developers had planned to build 198 units on the site, including a mix of condominium units and apartments with a total density of 17 units per acre.

Andy Williams, kids pay visit to jailed Claudine

ASPEN, Colo. (UPI) — French-born singer Claudine Longet, dressed in the white coveralls of a prisoner, received Mother's Day hugs from her three children and former husband Andy Williams in the stark booking room of Pitkin County Jail.

While other mothers were escorted Sunday to church and dinner, the former Las Vegas showgirl waited in her cell for Noelle, 13, Christian, 11, and Bobby, 7. She received no flowers or gifts.

A spokesman said her only other visitor was a Roman Catholic clergyman and that she spent the rest of the day reading and listening to the radio.

MISS LONGET, 36, was convicted of criminally negligent homicide in the March 1976 shooting death of her lover, professional skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich. She was denied her bid to the Colorado Supreme Court to be released from jail in time for Mother's Day.

Deputy Sheriff Gary White said Sunday's meeting was held in the 10-by 12-foot booking area "where visitors always meet the prisoners." He said the room, containing a desk and plain chairs, was devoid of painting or plants.

Williams and the children had a private visit of about 25 minutes, said the deputy.

White said the youngsters could not see the cell their mother beautified with blue, yellow and green paint and potted plants sent to her by friends.

Claudine Longet

He said the cell was through two doors, down a hallway and around a corner from the booking room of the 90-year-old jail.

MISS LONGET began serving a 30-day term April 18.

Defense attorney Ron Austin argued to the state Supreme Court Friday that Miss Longet should have been released Saturday because she was a "model prisoner" and was allowed 10 days' "good time" privileges.

The justices unanimously ruled the 30-day jail term was a condition of probation set by District Court Judge George Lohr and not subject to trusteeship provisions of Colorado law.

Miss Longet faces two years of supervised probation following completion of the jail term May 15.

Britain dubs Carter 'hero,' press gives rave reviews

by HELEN THOMAS

LONDON (UPI) — President Carter, dubbed by the British "a hero" the world has been needing, worshipped Sunday at Westminster Abbey and put in a personal appeal for Welsh poet Dylan Thomas to be enshrined in "Poet's Corner."

Carter, on the last day of the London summit, received rave reviews from the British who compared him to the late President John F. Kennedy.

One newspaper said Carter was what "the world needed for a heck of a long time."

Carter arose early Sunday and went without fanfare to early 8 a.m. services at the famed 11th Century Abbey. He knelt among about 100 worshipers who were aware of his presence but took it in stride.

Bishop Edward Knapp-Fisher, the presiding clergyman, afterward took Carter on a tour of the famed Abbey, originally a Benedictine monastery built by Edward the Confessor and where British monarchs have been crowned since William the Conqueror.

THE BISHOP took Carter to Poet's Corner, located in an apse of the Abbey and where British and American poets, such as John Masefield and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow are memorialized.

"I think you ought to commemorate Dylan Thomas," Carter said. The Welsh poet, known also for his heavy drinking and who died in New York in 1953 of cirrhosis of the liver, is one of Carter's favorites. Carter frequently quoted from Thomas during his presidential campaign.

"I am quite sure he will be commemorated whatever our view of his morals," Knapp-Fisher said. But he indicated a certain time had to elapse before a poet could enter Poet's Corner.

Carter said, "I'll pray for his soul, if you will memorialize him. I would like to recommend him."

The Bishop smiled and said he would pass on the President's recommendation to the committee of four men which discusses prospective nominees for poet's corner. The committee next meets Tuesday.

AS THE BISHOP escorted Carter to the exit, he showed him a memorial to Franklin D. Roosevelt with, below, a book filled with all the names of Americans who had died in World War II.

"We pray for you constantly and continuously," Knapp-Fisher told Carter in farewell.

Carter replied, "I'll pray for you, too."

Carter, who in two days has stunned the normally stolid British into rare displays of warmth and affection, Sunday won the praise of Britain's highly critical press as well.

"I have seen in action," wrote John Knight of the London Sunday Mirror, "what the Western world has desperately needed for a heck of a long time — a hero."

"Without getting too misty-eyed," Knight said, "I detect the same whiff of high excitement which Jack Kennedy generated."

THE MORE sober Sunday Times wrote, "His presence gives delight and excitement. We have learned to look for much less in a world leader."

While on a trip to Newcastle in England's industrial northeast, Carter brought roars of approval from the locals by greeting them with their soccer team's battle cry, "Hway the lads!"

The staid Observer newspaper likened it to Kennedy's famous quote in the shadow of the Berlin wall and said, "it may not be as memorable a phrase as 'Ich bin ein Berliner.' But it worked."

Everywhere Carter has been — in Newcastle or London — he has attracted large crowds almost to the exclusion of the other six world leaders here for the summit.

WHEN CARTER attended a state banquet hosted by Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace Saturday night, a reporter asked one of the crowd standing outside the Palace gates, "are you here to see the Queen?"

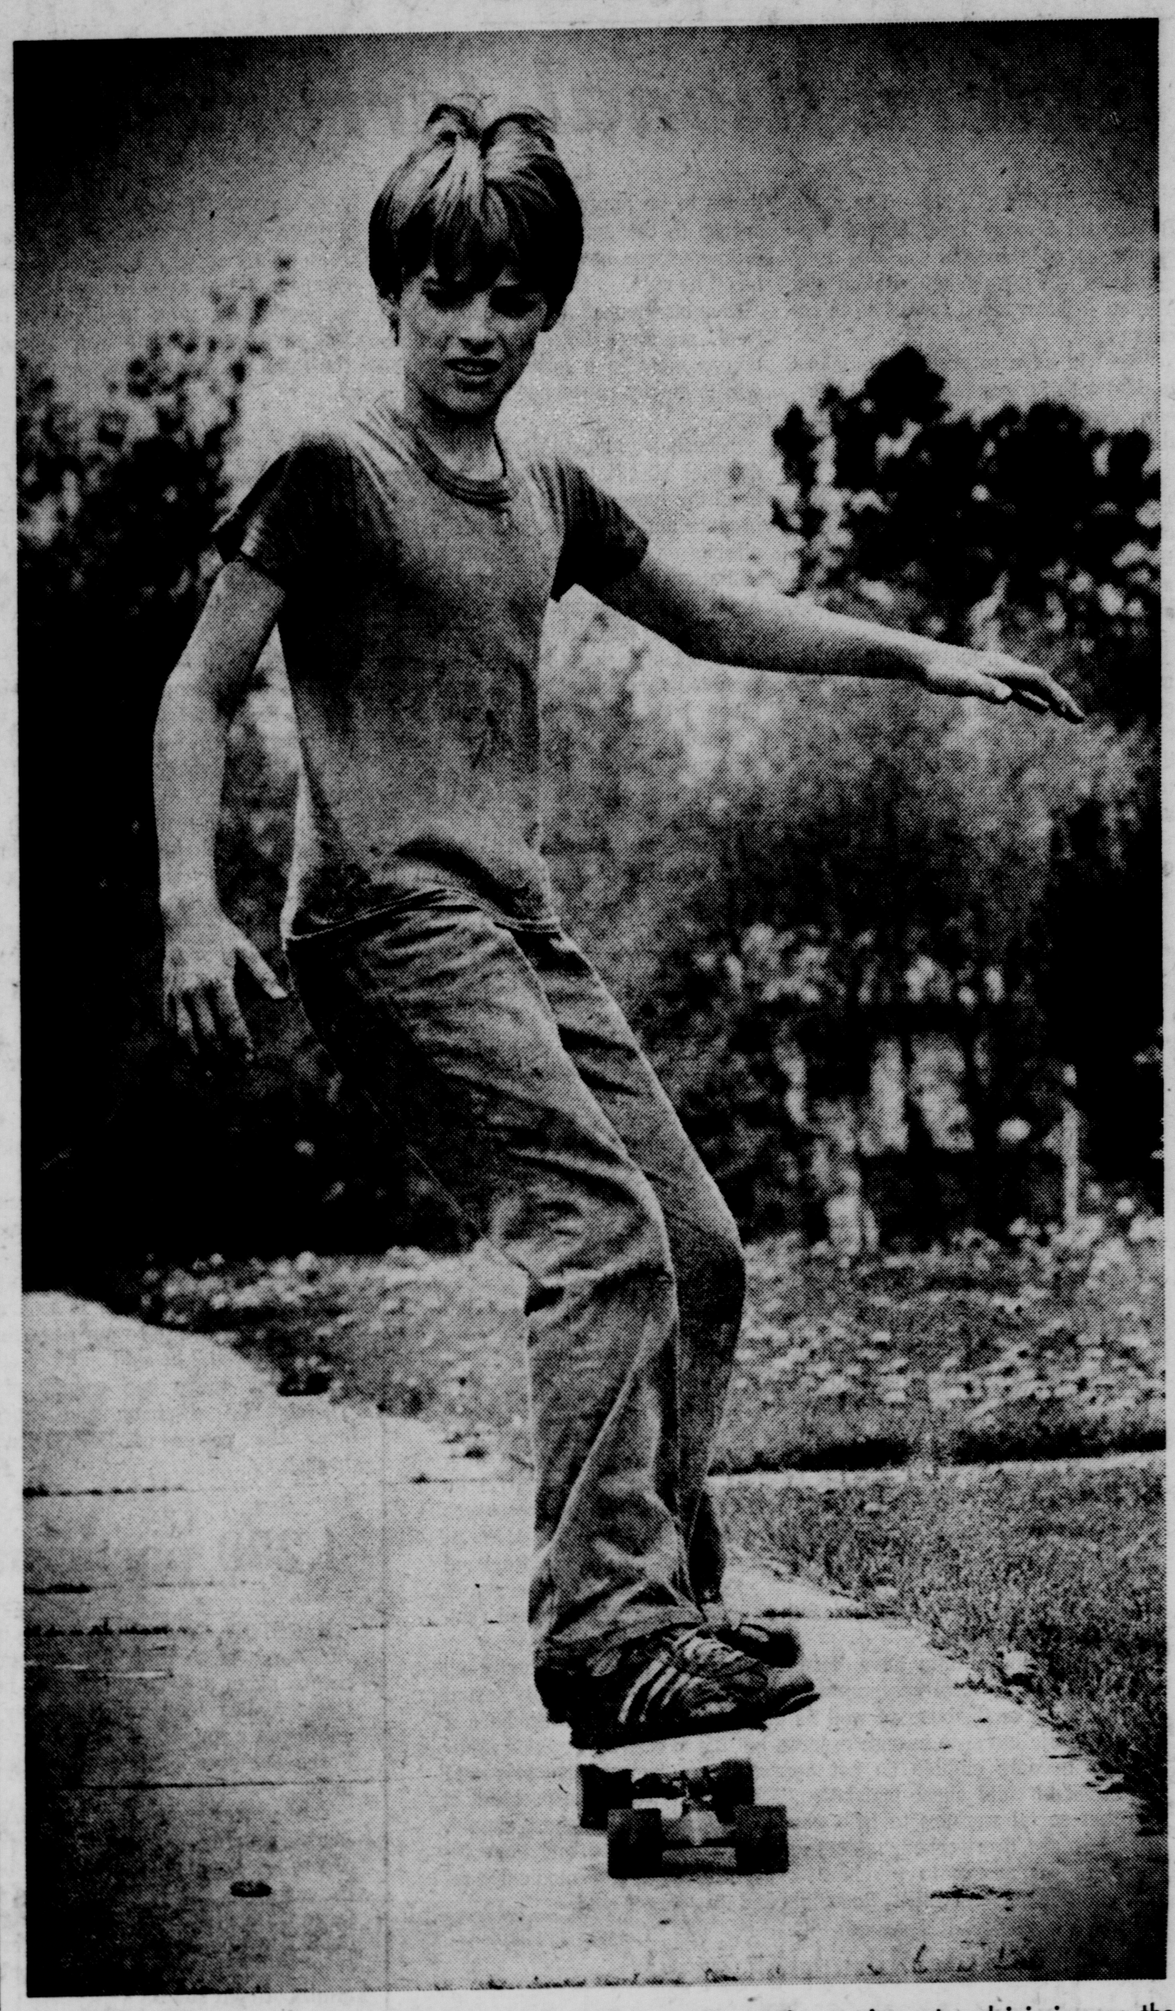

"No, we want to see Jimmy Carter," was the reply.

No anti-American signs or demonstrations have marred Carter's visit. One demonstrating group even wrote a letter to Carter apologizing for protesting a local factory closure during his trip, saying they meant no ill will toward him.

Yet the British, being the British, could not resist poking a little fun.

Across the whole front page of the Sunday Times was a cartoon showing a line of Britons waiting to greet Carter. The last woman in line — in an echo of Britain's war-time reaction to American troops — is saying:

"Got any nylons?"

• Encourage and provide public and private aid, including assistance from Communist nations, to developing nations and to achieve a successful conclusion of the North-South dialogue between developed and developing nations.

Although mentioned in the final document, conference sources said the leaders agreed in principle to establish a $1 billion fund for developing nations. The United States and Common Market nations would contribute $750,000 in equal shares and the rest would be solicited from other nations.

Carter said the leaders also agreed to the need for "international control against illegalities, bribery, extortion and other actions which have sometimes been condoned in the field of trade, commerce and banking."

"I was impressed," he said, "by the strong support of the conference to stamp out this embarrassment which has been brought upon us in the industrial world."

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt warned of what he termed "the immense danger of egotism" in exchange rates and financial affairs.

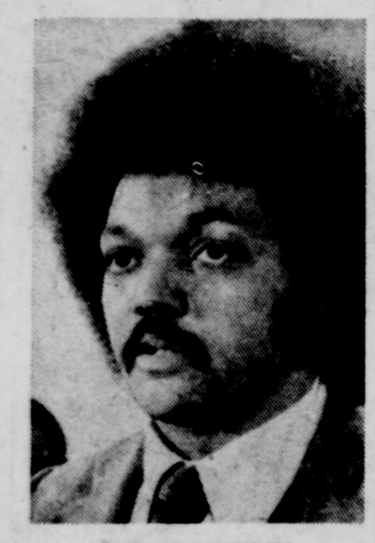

CARTER WELCOMED "the very good attitude of the oil supplying nations like Saudi Arabia and others which not only supply aid for developing countries but also participate with us in making decisions commensurate with their own economic influence."

Carter said the summit leaders are inviting the Communist bloc nations "in a congenial way" to join the west in providing aid to poorer nations.

Italy's Giulio Andreotti said "the message from London is one of hope and confidence, even though the full consciousness of the gravity of the situation is present."

The summit conference of the leaders of the United States, West Germany, France, Great Britain, Italy, Canada and Japan was the third in two years but the first for Carter. Last year, the leaders of the seven nations met in Puerto Rico and in late 1976 they met in France.

IUD warning on side effects urged by FDA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration told the nation's doctors Sunday to advise women requesting intrauterine birth control devices that they may suffer side effects ranging from blood poisoning to painful intercourse.

The agency said a doctor should give IUD patients a detailed information sheet before the devices are inserted. An estimated three million American women use IUDs.

"Our goal is to make sure that each woman and her physician have enough information to select the most suitable method of contraception," FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said.

"WE ENCOURAGE women to look for and request these new brochures on IUD's when they become available later this year," he said.

"We will require manufacturers to print patient brochures in quantities larger than the number of IUDs produced, so this information can be readily available in clincs, physicians' offices and health facilities."

New rules requiring the brochures be distributed for IUD patients where first proposed in July 1975 and will take effect in November. Last December the agency issued similar regulations for birth control pills requiring that brochures be given to women when prescriptions are written or refilled.

THE LENGTHY IUD information sheet explains exactly how the devices work and warns patients to tell doctors of any unusual health conditions before asking for an IUD.

It also lists adverse reactions which may be suffered, including anemia, backache, blood poisoning, bowel obstruction, cervical infection, cysts on the ovaries and tubes, fainting at the time of insertion or removal, pregnancy outside the uterus, painful intercourse and prolonged or heavy menstrual flow.

The brochure tells women how to check the device, once it is in place, to make sure it stays where it should.

There also is a special warning about the occurrence of pregnancy when the IUD is in place. It notes that deaths have occurred from pregnancies which continued while an IUD was in place.

Safety equipment can cut skateboard injuries

by KURT BAER

Skateboarders are the children of summer.

This year they have returned to the streets and sidewalks of suburbia in record numbers and can be found "hanging ten" down the slightest available grade.

Sometimes they dress like hockey players with a crash helmet, knee pads and gloves. But more often, their uniform is a T-shirt, blue jeans and a pair of well-worn tennis shoes.

IT'S A ROUGH sport in which skin and bone always proves softer than concrete.

The more serious skateboard injuries wind up in hospital emergency rooms. Doctors say head injuries, broken collar bones, cuts to the face and chin are the most common.

Dr. Mart Jalakas, emergency room physician at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, said it is not unusual for doctors to see several skateboard injuries a day at the hospital.

"They come in with anything from scrapes, broken arms, contusions of the head and, though I haven't seen any this year, they can get skull fractures," he said.

THE CONSUMER Products Safety Commission estimates there were 71,438 skateboard-related injuries treated in hospital emergency rooms last year, compared to 27,528 such injuries in 1975 and only 3,230 in 1974.

"Bicycle accidents still lead. There were 500,000 of them last year," said a spokesman for the Consumer Products Safety Commission. "But the increase in the number of skateboard injuries shows the popularity of the sport."

Skateboarding does not have to be a neck-breaking sport, the experts say. Like everything else, there is a right and a wrong way to go about it.

"A lot of kids learn the hard way. They take a few spills and after a while it registers with them that they should get some safety equipment," says Larry Medrano, 23, an accomplished skateboarder who is interested in opening a skateboard park in the area.

SAFETY EQUIPMENT does not have to strain even a youngster's budget. Knee and elbow pads can be purchased for about $4, a hockey helmet often on sale at this time of year, costs about $6, he says.

"It's a small investment really, and it's worth it," he says.

Skateboarders can minimize injuries by thinking before they fall, Medrano says. "The best way to fall is to roll, around and around. A big guy is apt to just fall flat, but the kids, generally speaking, can roll."

Kids 7, 8 or 10 years old are "pretty resilient," Dr. Jalakas says. "But when Daddy decides to try out the skateboard, the chances of him getting injured are pretty good."

Medrano said he is looking into opening a commercial skateboarding park in the area. A smooth concrete incline slopes about 150 feet into a "bowl" about 25 feet across and 9 feet deep which, Medrano says, "looks like a swimming pool without water."

Skateboarders can ride up and down the walls, keeping a precarious balance against gravity and centrifugal force.

Israel angry over U.S. arms list

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli leaders Sunday reacted angrily to reports the United States has excluded the country from a list of nations with priority to receive U.S. arms supplies and "insisted" it be given top consideration.

"Israel will insist on occupying the preferred position and will not agree to remain with all the rest," Foreign Minister Yigal Allon told the cabinet session.

"The matter should be seen as severe and serious," Allon commented in response to reports the United States has made up a list of nations — NATO countries, Australia and Japan — that should get top priority in weapons supplies.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who last month took leave of absence because of a Washington bank account scandal, emerged from political obscurity to warn the United States against imposing a peace plan on Israel.

"IF THE Americans bring a program of their own, they will lose their unique position in the Middle East," Rabin said, speaking in public for the first time since he took the leave.

Allon's comments were leaked to the state radio immediately after the close of the cabinet meeting. Government sources said the minister would raise the matter with Secy. of State Cyrus Vance in talks later this week.

Acting Prime Minister Shimon Peres declared Israel would use every possible means to guarantee what he called its special relationship with the United States in weapons supply, production and development, the radio report said.

IT'S A ROUGH sport in which skin and bone always proves softer than concrete.

The more serious skateboard injuries wind up in hospital emergency rooms. Doctors say head injuries, broken collar bones, cuts to the face and chin are the most common.

Dr. Mart Jalakas, emergency room physician at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, said it is not unusual for doctors to see several skateboard injuries a day at the hospital.

"They come in with anything from scrapes, broken arms, contusions of the head and, though I haven't seen any this year, they can get skull fractures," he said.

THE CONSUMER Products Safety Commission estimates there were 71,438 skateboard-related injuries treated in hospital emergency rooms last year, compared to 27,528 such injuries in 1975 and only 3,230 in 1974.

"Bicycle accidents still lead. There were 500,000 of them last year," said a spokesman for the Consumer Products Safety Commission. "But the increase in the number of skateboard injuries shows the popularity of the sport."

Skateboarding does not have to be a neck-breaking sport, the experts say. Like everything else, there is a right and a wrong way to go about it.

"A lot of kids learn the hard way. They take a few spills and after a while it registers with them that they should get some safety equipment," says Larry Medrano, 23, an accomplished skateboarder who is interested in opening a skateboard park in the area.

SAFETY EQUIPMENT does not have to strain even a youngster's budget. Knee and elbow pads can be purchased for about $4, a hockey helmet often on sale at this time of year, costs about $6, he says.

"It's a small investment really, and it's worth it," he says.

Skateboarders can minimize injuries by thinking before they fall, Medrano says. "The best way to fall is to roll, around and around. A big guy is apt to just fall flat, but the kids, generally speaking, can roll."

Kids 7, 8 or 10 years old are "pretty resilient," Dr. Jalakas says. "But when Daddy decides to try out the skateboard, the chances of him getting injured are pretty good."

Medrano said he is looking into opening a commercial skateboarding park in the area. A smooth concrete incline slopes about 150 feet into a "bowl" about 25 feet across and 9 feet deep which, Medrano says, "looks like a swimming pool without water."

Skateboarders can ride up and down the walls, keeping a precarious balance against gravity and centrifugal force.

IUD warning on side effects urged by FDA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration told the nation's doctors Sunday to advise women requesting intrauterine birth control devices that they may suffer side effects ranging from blood poisoning to painful intercourse.

The agency said a doctor should give IUD patients a detailed information sheet before the devices are inserted. An estimated three million American women use IUDs.

"Our goal is to make sure that each woman and her physician have enough information to select the most suitable method of contraception," FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said.

"WE ENCOURAGE women to look for and request these new brochures on IUD's when they become available later this year," he said.

"We will require manufacturers to print patient brochures in quantities larger than the number of IUDs produced, so this information can be readily available in clincs, physicians' offices and health facilities."

New rules requiring the brochures be distributed for IUD patients where first proposed in July 1975 and will take effect in November. Last December the agency issued similar regulations for birth control pills requiring that brochures be given to women when prescriptions are written or refilled.

THE LENGTHY IUD information sheet explains exactly how the devices work and warns patients to tell doctors of any unusual health conditions before asking for an IUD.

It also lists adverse reactions which may be suffered, including anemia, backache, blood poisoning, bowel obstruction, cervical infection, cysts on the ovaries and tubes, fainting at the time of insertion or removal, pregnancy outside the uterus, painful intercourse and prolonged or heavy menstrual flow.

The brochure tells women how to check the device, once it is in place, to make sure it stays where it should.

There also is a special warning about the occurrence of pregnancy when the IUD is in place. It notes that deaths have occurred from pregnancies which continued while an IUD was in place.

Israel angry over U.S. arms list

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli leaders Sunday reacted angrily to reports the United States has excluded the country from a list of nations with priority to receive U.S. arms supplies and "insisted" it be given top consideration.

"Israel will insist on occupying the preferred position and will not agree to remain with all the rest," Foreign Minister Yigal Allon told the cabinet session.

"The matter should be seen as severe and serious," Allon commented in response to reports the United States has made up a list of nations — NATO countries, Australia and Japan — that should get top priority in weapons supplies.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who last month took leave of absence because of a Washington bank account scandal, emerged from political obscurity to warn the United States against imposing a peace plan on Israel.

"IF THE Americans bring a program of their own, they will lose their unique position in the Middle East," Rabin said, speaking in public for the first time since he took the leave.

Allon's comments were leaked to the state radio immediately after the close of the cabinet meeting. Government sources said the minister would raise the matter with Secy. of State Cyrus Vance in talks later this week.

Acting Prime Minister Shimon Peres declared Israel would use every possible means to guarantee what he called its special relationship with the United States in weapons supply, production and development, the radio report said.

• The Rev. Jesse Jackson has opened his youth study campaign by attempting to obtain pledges from 100,000 parents that they will make their children study two hours at home each day. Jackson, head of People United to Save Humanity, decried the poor achievement record of urban school children. Jackson made the appeal at the annual PUSH Family Affair in the International Amphitheater Saturday night. He was flanked by Chicago Schools Superintendent Joseph Hannon and "Roots" author Alex Haley.

• A bust of Chicago's late Mayor Richard J. Ideas for a Daley memorial have been forwarded to George Dunne, chairman of the Public Building Commission. Dunne will decide the future of a bust and the Picasso statue.

Four countries aid guerrillas

International terrorism increasing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Dept. said Sunday international terrorism is on the increase and four countries — Libya, Iraq, Somalia and Yemen — have aided terrorists in recent years.

"We will have to prepare ourselves to deal with further attacks on American citizens and installations abroad," the department said.

Sen. Jacob Javis, R-N.Y., had requested the information in a form that could be published. He recalled that Harold Rosenthal, one of his former aides, was killed in a terrorist attack at Istanbul airport last August.

"THE STATE Department's agreement to present its information in unclassified form is an important development in that it clearly identifies those governments that have helped to allow terrorism to exist," Javits said.

"It is now up to the civilized nations of the world to determine what it believes to be appropriate action in response to the activities of these governments who have sided with terrorists," he said.

Douglas Bennet Jr., assistant State Dept. secretary for congressional relations, said in a letter to Javits he also is deeply concerned about terrorism.

"There is, unfortunately, every indication that international terrorism is on the increase and we will have to prepare ourselves to deal with further attacks on American citizens and installations abroad, including those of American companies," he said.

BENNET ENCLOSED with the letter a list of incidents where terrorists received support, aid or asylum from Libya, Iraq, Yemen and Somalia.

It said Libya gave refuge to perpetrators of the October, 1972, massacre at the Munich Olympic Games; to hijackers of a Lufthansa aircraft in October, 1973; to hijackers of a Japanese Air Line Boeing blown up in July, 1973; to terrorists who attacked a TWA plane at Athens in August, 1973; to terrorists who tried to shoot down an El Al airliner outside Rome in September, 1973; to hijackers of a British Airways plane over Dubai in the Persian Gulf November, 1974, and to kidnapers of Arab oil ministers in December, 1975.

Iraq, Yemen and Somalia have been major supporters of a group known as "Rejectionist Palestine" and have allowed their lands to be used as sanctuaries for terrorists, it said.

Humphrey sees Nixon interview as saddening

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., said David Frost's televised interview with Richard Nixon was "saddening" because the former president was not candid.

Hubert Humphrey

"I felt he wasn't leveling with his audience. I felt he was still covering up," Humphrey said of his old political foe.

"I caught some of the first part of the interview and quite honestly I was saddened by it," the former vice president said Saturday. Humphrey was visiting the hometown of the late President Harry Truman to receive a Truman Public Service Award.

HUMPHREY, WHO lost the 1968 presidential election to Nixon, said in a news conference that seeing the widely publicized Nixon interviews with Frost was like "exhuming a body."

"This (Watergate) was just an ugly, ugly, mean, nasty chapter in American history and I don't see any need for it to be replayed," he said.

"I think we've had enough of it. There's still suspicion and concern over the power of the executive branch.

"BUT WATERGATE has had its good points too. It caused Congress to adopt a more stringent code of ethics policy, for example."

Humphrey, vice president under President Lyndon Johnson, said the post-Watergate era opened a new chapter in American politics.

"Out of all the difficulties we've had, we've learned that American society is a very human instrument. We learn from pain, from suffering," he said. "The reforms that have come, have come as a result of crisis."

Child abuse talkup but services lag

Concern over child abuse has increased greatly during the past decade, but services to help battered children have not kept pace with legislation designed to protect them, it was reported Sunday. Fewer than 7,000 cases of child abuse came to the attention of authorities in 1967, while more than 200,000 were reported in 1974, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported in its latest edition. "No child welfare department had the resources remotely adequate to deal with this deluge," wrote Dr. Alvin A. Rosenfeld, of theChild Psychiatry Unit at the Naval Regional Medical Center in Portsmouth, Va., and Dr. Eli H. Newberger of the Harvard Medical School and Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, Mass.

Child abuse laws have been esponded to include virtually all childhood physical symptoms of family crises — physical, sexual and emotional abuse as well as child neglect. "There has been a dramatic increase in case reports, but the services for which families become eligible do not approach the humane rhetoric and intent of child abuse legislation," the report said. One problem is that social workers to help abused children are in short supply. They are overworked, underpaid, poorly supervised and have insufficient access to psychiatric, psychological and medical consultation and treatment, Rosenfeld and Newberger said.

U.S. Steel blacklist eyed

The U. S.Environmental Protection Agency will consider a proposal Monday that it blacklist U S. Steel Corp. for chronic pollution violations. The giant steelmaker went to court Friday to seek a delay of the hearings, which could result in an end to the firm's eligibility to receive future government contracts. But U. S. District Court Judge John Powers Crowley denied the request. U. S. Steel, due to violations at its South works in Chicago, could become the sixth firm blacklisted by the EPA. The EPA has charged that the South Works Sinter plant — designed to collect and recycle waste materials — exceeds fderal limits on emissions of soot and particulate matter.

4,200 participate in mock battle

BARSTOW, Calif. (UPI) — The U.S. Air Force is to drop live 500-pound bombs along a stretch of desert near Death Valley today and Tuesday to culminate a four-week joint Army-Air Force exercise involving about 4,200 men.

The exercise at Fort Irwin, an Army training center in the high desert just south of Death Valley, is to include on its last two days one of the largest "live-fire" exercises ever conducted by the Army and Air Force, Capt. William Wisenbaker, a public affairs officer, said.

Ten Air Force units, one Marine Corps unit and 19 Army units from bases around the ocuntry were taking part in the mock battles called by the Army "Task Force Irwin II."

AN ARMY spokesman said most of the units were taking a day off Sunday as gusty winds trailing from a Pacific storm raked across the barren military reserve.

The base was activated in 1940 as an anti-aircraft range. It was inactive for seven years and became useful again in 1951 as a training center for combat units during the Korean conflict.

It was made a fort in 1961, and went through periods of deactivation. It contains the Goldstone tracking station which supports the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's deep-space network.

The exercise began with the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N. Car. parachuting on to the desert while other units used live fire from machine guns and grenades. Low flying jets struck at mock enemy positions with napalm.

DURING THE early stages of the exercise, called "Red Flag 77-6" by the Air Force, close air-support aircraft were used in live-fire training of antitank missiles and other weapons.

F-4 Phantom jets and Cobra attack helicopters armed with anti-tank missiles were also used.

An array of radars and missiles was set up to provide air defense protection for the ground forces taking part.

CBers good for a laugh, help keep highways safe

by United Press International

Somewhere down in Indiana a speeding motorist went berserk, weaving from lane to lane and barely escaping several smashups.

"Mr. Bear, there's a silver four-wheeler acting crazy up here," came a voice on the Citizens' Band radio.

Moments later a patrol car had overtaken and stopped the offending vehicle.

THAT WAS ONE incident on a recent 1,800-mile roundtrip swing from Madison, Wis., to Atlanta which proved that the CB "good buddies" of mid-America help keep highways safe.

They can also make you laugh.

Like down in Chattanooga, Tenn., where the "County Mounties" were on the prowl.

"Lawdy, Lawdy. It looks like we're wall-to-wall in bears," said one trucker. "Tell me, what all you bears be doing out there?"

"Just giving you truckers something to talk about," replied one of the three county police cars within two miles of each other. "We were afraid you were getting a little bored in our fine town."

ON THAT TRIP I found out why CB is booming.

Listening to the truckers on Channel 19 helped pass the time. They sang, joked, clowned and made friends on the airways.

But, more importantly, they also gave help to lost motorists, persons in trouble and warned of potential trouble spots.

On the Tri-State Tollway outside of Chicago a four-wheeler pulled off the road. His engine was smoking and flames were licking out from under the hood.

In seconds, every CB-equipped motorist around was aware of the problem and could plan for a possible rapid stop. Authorities were notified.

AT LEAST two truckers with fire extinguishers volunteered to stop and help.

Then, midway through Tennessee, a car jumped a guardrail in the hills and landed upside down several feet below the highway. One trucker who witnessed the crash put out an alert and stopped to help.

His broadcasts helped authorities get to the scene quickly and alerted motorists to the hazard ahead.

Missouri lawmakers get own handle on CB craze

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Citizens' Band craze has hit the Missouri General Assembly, where the good legislative buddies are thicker than smokies at a trucker's convention.

"This is one of those stories that probably will win the award of the year for significance," said state Treasurer James I. Spainhower, also known as "Wooden Nickel" in CB parlance.

Spainhower was one of dozens of legislators, state officials and capitol hangers-on whose CB "handles" were published in a booklet last week by Rep. Joseph Kenton, D-Kansas City.

Kenton, an avid CBer, said he compiled the listings because he wanted to talk with some of his buddies on the roads to and from the capitol every Monday and Thursday.

A SPOT CHECK revealed few admit to using the CBs to spot smokies and violate those double nickels (55 m.p.h. speed limit) they voted into law two years ago.

"If I'm in a hurry, I just follow a trucker," said Rep. Russel "Flying Red Horse" Brockfeld, R-Warrenton.

Rep. Irene Treppler, R-St. Louis, appropriately is addressed as the "Speed Queen." Two years ago, she and former Rep. Mildred Huffman, R-St. Louis County, were stopped for speeding on their way to the legislature by one of only two female highway patrol troopers in the state.

Rep. Richard DeCoster, D-Canton, says his CB has become a useful tool for talking to constituents. When he's around the capital, DeCoster is the "Budget Cutter," a handle concocted by his fiscal conservative colleagues. At home, he's "Your Representative."

DeCoster said it has added a new dimension to politics, although it does have a few drawbacks.

"ONE GUY ONCE asked me about a bill up here about hunting dogs. Within five minutes everybody with a dog was on the air. I was embarrassed because I didn't know anything about the bill."

The one the speed demons never fool with is Rep. R.L. (Scoop) Usher, D-Macon, a retired highway patrolman who said the boys at Troop 8 in Macon gave him his handle "Scooper Bear."

But the most appropriate handle in the House belongs to Rep. Glenn Binger, D-Blue Springs — "The Flag Waver."

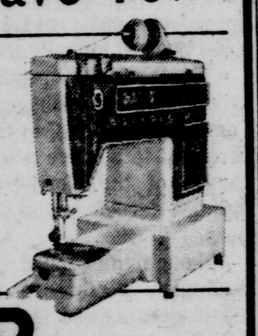

"The meaning is pretty obvious," said the sponsor of numerous motions and resolutions spurring his fellow lawmakers on to acts of patriotism. The rear window of Binger's old blue station wagon are covered with flag decals and "America — Love It or Leave It" stickers.

"Good things don't always come in small packages."

'Fire victim' not missed

by SCOTT FOSDICK

It's a foul little clapboard shack squeezed between a gas station and a hot dog stand.

A puzzled young man in a dusty sportcoat idles his car in the gravel lot out front. Sweat oozes from his temple as he sits in the heat and ponders: Is this the Blow Your Mind Bookstore?

The ramshackle hut is boarded up and padlocked, its signs broken beyond all recognition. Somebody has spray-painted "HELL HOLE" across the front, giving the only clue that this once might have been a successful pornography palace. Where are the shiny magazines, filled with classy nudes and steaming sexpots?

The curious fellow gets his answer as an anonymous voice hurls an insult across the parking lot.

"You'll have to go to Chicago, PERVERT!" — a blunt remark to take even for a reporter.

MANY WHEELING residents were glad to see the Blow Your Mind Bookstore shut down last week after a fire of undetermined origin hit the store April 22.

Many of them hope it will not reopen and they are more than willing to vent their feelings about the place directly to those who visit the premises.

"I'm happy as hell it's gone. Everyone around here is," said Roger Walsh, owner and cook at R.J.'s Hot Dogs, a tiny fast-food stand barely 20 yards from the bookstore.

Angry Wheeling residents and members of the village board had been trying for years to shut down the store at 727 S. Milwaukee Ave. But they have been unsuccessful, largely because the adult bookstore lies a block or two south of the Wheeling village limits, in the unincorporated part of Wheeling Township.

Fire closed the shop last week and Wheeling Fire Dept. officials have been unable to locate its owner, William Mello. Cook County building officials last week posted a notice on the structure declaring it in "'dangerous condition" and prohibiting its use or occupancy.

"I'M GLAD TO see him out, because I get more families in here. They were afraid to come in here," Walsh said as he plopped a polish sausage in front of a customer.

Wlash, who has operated the hot dog stand on Milwaukee Avenue for four years, gets a constant view of the bookstore from his grill behind the counter. He has seen the shop's patrons furtively coming and goin and he has developed a cynical picture of the kind of person that buys pornography.

"Idiots. All walks of life. Even the state was going in there, you'd see state cars parked out there," he said, adding with a disgusted shake of his head, "Forest rangers were going in there!"

"People would drive in here and park by my place. I said, 'Hey it's private parking!' And they'd just turn around and leave. They didn't want to be seen parking in front of it," he said.

"The thing that really turned me off, they'd go in there with their kids in the car, little kids. Or they take them in with them. That really turned my stomach," he said.

WALSH SAID the shop didn't just draw middle-aged businessmen. He said many women also frequented the shop.

"People in town complained that their daughters are hiding stuff under their beds that they get from the place," he said.

Mrs. John Klinger, whose husband owns the nearby Quality Door store at 7075 S. Milwaukee Ave., agrees the shop was a threat to children.

"I don't think it's any kind of a bookstore to have around here, especially with all the children. You've got a trailer court over here and children are always around," she said. "If they really want a bookstore they should have it someplace else where there aren't so many children."

Mrs. Klinger also complained about bookstore customers who tried to keep their anonymity by parking in Quality Door's lot.

"If you want to go over to the bookstore, go over. But park over there," she said.

"I UNDERSTAND they were making money left and right, but it's just a shack. Of course, if people want something, they don't care where they buy it," she said.

Not all the people who run businesses in the area think adult book stores should be kept out of the area.

"Sure, I don't think there's nothing wrong with it. Everybody to their own thing. If the guy's willing to pay for it, let him have it," said Dan Hora, manager of the Bi-Lo gas station just south of the bookstore.

Fred Lew, 61 S Milwaukee Ave., a patron of the hot dog stand said he thinks the fire could have been set by someone who wanted to close down the bookstore.

"The people who are trying to run him out are worse than he is," Lew said.

"Nobody likes that kind of stuff, but so long as they keep the children out, I don't see what's wrong with it," he said.

"Curiosity gets you. I was about to go in there once until I found out they charge a dollar at the door."

Hayter expects respect as Hoffman's president

by JOHN LAMPINEN

For 10 minutes, Virginia Hayter listened.

Now it was her turn.

In a strong, even voice, the village president of Hoffman Estates said she should add into the record a letter she had received earlier from Inverness Village Pres. Russell Puzey opposing the controversial housing project.

She went through the paragraphs without adding inflection. Occasionally, as she read words such as "appalling" and "astounding" used to describe the proposed annexation, she looked up from her papers to glare directly at Puzey and at Inverness Village Atty. J. William Braithwaite seated next to him.

THE LETTER completed, she began her rebuttal, her voice rising notably, both in volume and in pitch.

Pointing out a contradiction in the Inverness position, she took a quick breath and charged the opponent "had better figure out which it wants."

Another Inverness suggestion is "morally abhorrent to me," she concluded, and the village board went on to back her on the annexation without a hint of dissent.

Just as quickly, Mrs. Hayter became the partisan adversary no more. She smiled at the Inverness representatives who were quietly getting up to leave and in a warm voice, thanked them for coming.

Virginia Hayter is an enigma.

HER CRITICS say she is intensely disliked, that her personality is grating and that she is dictatorial. The voters say she is village president.

At 43, she began her second term last week. It is a position she has achieved in impressive style despite her detractors' criticism.

She won reelection by a record, 4-1 margin in April. Four years ago, she took on an incumbent village president and whipped him almost 2-1 to become the first woman chief executive in the Northwest suburbs.

In 1969, she was the top vote-getter when she originally was elected to the village board. And in her first election in 1965, she was elected to the Schaumburg Township Dist. 59 Board of Education in her closest race by 483 votes.

She perhaps explained it best once last winter.

"There are some people who would say I am a tough and not always well-loved individual," she said. "This job doesn't mean that everybody has to love you. They just have to respect you."

Even her critics admit she is a commanding figure.

As vocal champions of the Barrington area's open space cause, Puzey and Braithwaite are hardly timid men. But they, like others in the past, learned last week, Mrs. Hayter is in charge when the ball is in her court.

Building proponents find the same holds true for them. A sarcastic, "Oh boy, here we go again," usually rings the council chambers when a distasteful housing project is unveiled.

AT A RECENT plan commission meeting she attended, Mrs. Hayter called a developer's representative over with a finger and, referring to a high-density plan being discussed, warned, "You tell him I'm going to cut that thing down when it comes before the board."

However, she is not as heavy-handed as her image appears, she says. Part of the reason it may seem that way, she says, is that when something bothers her, she blows up and gets it out of her system.

She gives an example of it herself.

Before she decided to run for trustee in 1969, Mrs. Hayter recalls, she attended a village board meeting and was amazed at how it was run by former Village Pres. Roy L. Jenkins, who since has gone to prison for corruption.

"After the meeting, I walked up and said, "Roy, you have had it; you have finally galvanized me and you're not going to be standing here after May 1.'"

Government is a business, she says, and it's about time politicians start recognizing it for the business it is. If they do, she says, they won't be able to play games with their offices.

There is a reason Mrs. Hayter tries to spread the plaudits for her accomplishments, von Sothen says: she is a team player whether the team is the Republican party, the village board or the village as a whole.

"She doesn't like to take a lot of personal credit for a lot of the things she is responsible for behind the scenes," he says.

It is uncharacteristic of a politician who is supposed to be so rigid.

Theory has it there are three kinds of women politicians, Mrs. Hayter says, the "iron maiden" which is a nice way of saying battle ax; the earth mother who wants to mother everyone; and the kind who attaches herself to a high-status male as a protege.

"I think they try to put me as the iron maiden and some times I do it just because it's expected of me."

say. Extending Ridge Avenue past Kirchoff Road to Central Road and the installation of traffic signals at both intersections should correct those hazards, they insist.

THREE alternatives for correcting the problem will be studied by the village board's finance committee at a meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd. Details of the plans were not available Friday.

Opposition to the plan has been organized by residents along Ridge Avenue and the Park School PTA through its newsletter. The newsletter cites the village's new thoroughfare plan which in one section projects 5,000 cars will use Ridge Avenue by 1980 but in another section projects traffic will increase to 8,000-10,000 by 1980. Traffic on the street now totals about 2,500 cars a day, Village Planner Joseph Kesler said.

Kesler said Friday that the 8,000-10,000 figure was a mistake. "It should only be 4,000-8,000," he said.

Barbara Dumit, 406 S. Ridge Ave., says the numbers aren't that important. "To me, one more car on the street would be more than we need. Three thousand is too many," she said.

"I watch the kids try to cross Ridge now to get to South Junior High School and Park School and Wayside School. The crossing guards don't have any power to stop the cars so the kids have to dash between them," Mrs. Dumit said.

PROJECTIONS in the thoroughfare plan estimate traffic will at least double on Ridge Avenue by 1980 are not because of the plan to extend the street past the hospital, Kesler said.

"That has hardly anything to do with it. Population increase is the number one reason. The hospital road will cause a small increase but nothing like this," he said.

Opponents of the Ridge Avenue extension say traffic has increased greatly in the past year because of the new Ridge Avenue railroad crossing.

"This is a residential area with parks and schools and the whole thing," said Lawrence Metz, 804 S. Ridge Ave. "Changing this roadway through the hospital would seem to be to encourage more traffic to use Ridge. They wouldn't build it if they didn't think it would be used and we can't cope with any more traffic," he said.

ARLINGTON Heights Road and Wilke Road, although two miles apart, are sufficient as major north-south arterials, Mrs. Dumit said. "There is no need to have a third street and endanger an established neighborhood and our children's access to schools and parks," she said.

Kesler, however, disagreed. "Theoretically you should have a major arterial every mile," he said.

The purpose of extending Ridge Avenue is not to provide another main arterial, but to alleviate safety problems where Kirchoff and Central roads intersect with the hospital road.

"Any safety problems with the hospital drive can be handled independently, without realigning it with Ridge," Metz said.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS recognize the safety problems and are willing to help resolve them, Malcolm MacCoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said.

"We feel responsible to try and help solve the safety problem. As for need of changing the road, that's a village matter," MacCoun said.

"We've already told the village that the schemes they have developed for making our driveway into a roadway are all unsatisfactory to us," MacCoun said. "They would mean cutting across our front lawn, they would prohibit any future development in that direction and we think it would create as many safety problems on our property as it would be attempting to solve," he said.

Man killed in car, cycle collision

A Bensenville man was killed and a woman was injured Sunday afternoon when a motorcycle they were riding collided with a car near Elk Grove Village.

Steve A. Esposito, 20, was killed at 1:45 p.m. Sunday when a motorcycle he was driving struck a car driven by Debbie Nicholas, 18, of 91 E. Millers Rd., Des Plaines, authorities said.

Police said Ms. Nicholas drove her car out of the east entrance to Busse Woods into the path of Esposito's eastbound motorcycle. Esposito was thrown from his motorcycle and struck a road sign, police said.

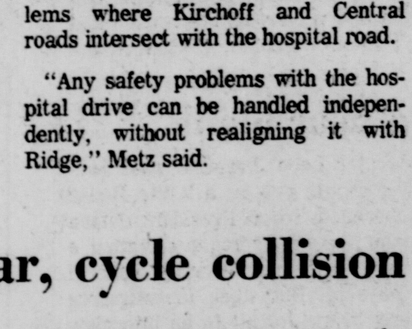

Janet Nystrom, 28, of Bensenville, a passenger on Esposito's motorcycle, received a compound fracture of her right leg and cuts on her head, shoulder, hands and feet, Elk Grove Village Fire Dept. paramedics said.

Firefighters rushed Ms. Nystron to Alexian Brothers Medical Center Elk Grove Village, where she was reported in serious condition in the intensive care unit Sunday night.

Ms. Nicholas was taken to Alexian Brothers for treatment of possible shock, and was released from the hospital Sunday afternoon.

No charges were filed Sunday night pending an investigation by Illinois State Police, authorities said.

Barbara Dumit, 406 S. Ridge Ave., says the numbers aren't that important. "To me, one more car on the street would be more than we need. Three thousand is too many," she said.

"I watch the kids try to cross Ridge now to get to South Junior High School and Park School and Wayside School. The crossing guards don't have any power to stop the cars so the kids have to dash between them," Mrs. Dumit said.

PROJECTIONS in the thoroughfare plan estimate traffic will at least double on Ridge Avenue by 1980 are not because of the plan to extend the street past the hospital, Kesler said.

"That has hardly anything to do with it. Population increase is the number one reason. The hospital road will cause a small increase but nothing like this," he said.

Opponents of the Ridge Avenue extension say traffic has increased greatly in the past year because of the new Ridge Avenue railroad crossing.

"This is a residential area with parks and schools and the whole thing," said Lawrence Metz, 804 S. Ridge Ave. "Changing this roadway through the hospital would seem to be to encourage more traffic to use Ridge. They wouldn't build it if they didn't think it would be used and we can't cope with any more traffic," he said.

ARLINGTON Heights Road and Wilke Road, although two miles apart, are sufficient as major north-south arterials, Mrs. Dumit said. "There is no need to have a third street and endanger an established neighborhood and our children's access to schools and parks," she said.

Kesler, however, disagreed. "Theoretically you should have a major arterial every mile," he said.

The purpose of extending Ridge Avenue is not to provide another main arterial, but to alleviate safety problems where Kirchoff and Central roads intersect with the hospital road.

"Any safety problems with the hospital drive can be handled independently, without realigning it with Ridge," Metz said.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS recognize the safety problems and are willing to help resolve them, Malcolm MacCoun, president of Northwest Community Hospital, said.

"We feel responsible to try and help solve the safety problem. As for need of changing the road, that's a village matter," MacCoun said.

"We've already told the village that the schemes they have developed for making our driveway into a roadway are all unsatisfactory to us," MacCoun said. "They would mean cutting across our front lawn, they would prohibit any future development in that direction and we think it would create as many safety problems on our property as it would be attempting to solve," he said.

Man killed in car, cycle collision

A Bensenville man was killed and a woman was injured Sunday afternoon when a motorcycle they were riding collided with a car near Elk Grove Village.

Steve A. Esposito, 20, was killed at 1:45 p.m. Sunday when a motorcycle he was driving struck a car driven by Debbie Nicholas, 18, of 91 E. Millers Rd., Des Plaines, authorities said.

Police said Ms. Nicholas drove her car out of the east entrance to Busse Woods into the path of Esposito's eastbound motorcycle. Esposito was thrown from his motorcycle and struck a road sign, police said.

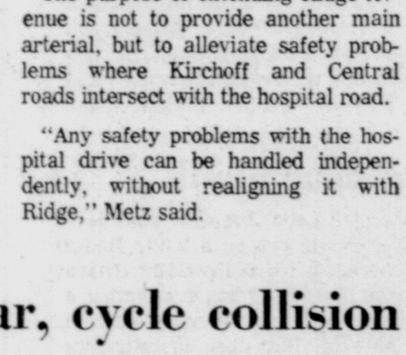

Janet Nystrom, 28, of Bensenville, a passenger on Esposito's motorcycle, received a compound fracture of her right leg and cuts on her head, shoulder, hands and feet, Elk Grove Village Fire Dept. paramedics said.

Firefighters rushed Ms. Nystron to Alexian Brothers Medical Center Elk Grove Village, where she was reported in serious condition in the intensive care unit Sunday night.

Ms. Nicholas was taken to Alexian Brothers for treatment of possible shock, and was released from the hospital Sunday afternoon.

No charges were filed Sunday night pending an investigation by Illinois State Police, authorities said.

RIOT POLICE in Japan use fire hoses and tear gas to hold back anti-airport radicals during demonstration.

Riot police battle Japanese radicals

Some 1,000 student radicals hurling firebombs and rocks Sunday repeatedly charged a cordon of 4,000 police armed with steel shields, tear gas and fire hoses in the third day of their fiery battle to recapture a new giant airport outside Tokyo. Two cars loaded with molotov cocktails, which the students intended to ram the police cordon, missed the target and one flaming vehicle hit the garage of a nearby house and set it afire, police said. Police said 110 policement were injured, many suffering from burns, and 33 students were arrested in the third day of student-farmer joint effort to retake the airfield. Police said 72 students have been arrested since Friday.

Student leaders said 300 students and farmers were injured, three seriously. One student suffered a fractured skull when hit by a police teargas canister. Leftist students say they are protesting against reopening of the $733 million new Narita airport 40 miles East of Tokyo for environmental reasons. They also say they sympathize with farmers whose lands were appropriated to make way for a new airport to divert the air traffic from congested Haneda airport.

Workers escorted in Irish strike

Police Sunday escorted workers past jeering Protestant militants who set up pickets outside Northern Ireland's largest power plant on the sixth day of a faltering strike. The workers — earlier reported "near breaking point" over threats to their lives and families — were buoyed by an outpouring of support from political and labor leaders and kept the huge Ballylumford plant operating at full capacity. Protestant militants renewed their appeal for a widened strike and called for a "total work stoppage" Monday by the province's 600,000 job holders, who have so far largely refused to join the walkout.

Hafez, Carter meet today

Syrian President Kafez Assad said in Geneva Sunday he hoped his meeting with President Carter results in a "new push towards peace." But aides said Assad had a "lot of questions" on Carter's new Middle East policy. Assad, who refused to go to either Washington or London to meet with Carter, flew to neutral Switzerland Sunday following a late night meeting with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat Saturday. No details of his talks with Arafat were announced. The two precincts will meet for some four hours Monday afternoon in Geneva's Hotel Intercontinental, which resembled an armed fortress, surrounded by more than 500 armed Swiss police and U.S. and Syrian security agents.

Tornado hits Long Beach, Calif.

A tornado that twisted out of a Pacific storm struck several blocks in Long Beach, Calif. Sunday, tearing the roof from a convalescent hospital, uprooting trees and damaging homes. Police said the twister, which struck before noon, caused extensive damage. There were no reports of injuries. Officers said about 50 patients of the Crestwood Convalescent Hopsital were evacuated because torrential rains were flooding the rooms after part of the roof was ripped away. None of the patients was reported as injured.

The twister raced in from the ocean near the Long Beach Arena and headed straight north into a residential area, police said. Patients from the convalescent home were taken to Pacific Hospital about a mile away. "Some walls and windows were broken and there's extensive water damage," Anna Wiseman, Crestwood administrator, said.

Nixon Dictabelt a near blank

Former Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Sunday, in addition to the famous 18½ minute gap on a White House tape recording, a Dictabelt subpoenaed from President Nixon turned out to be almost blank. Nixon apparently began dictating a memo about a phone conversation with former Attorney General John Mitchell on the Dictabelt, he said. But when investigators played it, the only words on it were, "Now John." In an interview on KPRC-TV, Jaworski noted that an 18½ minute gap on a June 20, 1972, Oval Office tape recording had never been explained. That was not the only time investigators were surprised, he said.

"We not only received an 18½-minute gap, but we also found the Dictabelt," he said. "Mr. Nixon had a habit following telephone conversations. He would pick up his Dictaphone and dictate a summary of his conversation. This happened to have been a conversation with John Mitchell after the break-in. When we got that belt by subpoena, all it had on it was, "Now John." And that was it."

Jaworski did not elaborate on what might have caused the silence.

No Soviet power fight: Turner

CIA Director Stansfield Turner says he sees no signs of terminal health problems in Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev nor any indications of a power struggle to succeed him at the Kremlin. In a U.S. News & World Report interview released Sunday, Turner said it appears Brezhnev's health goes "up and down. "Sometimes he wears himself out a bit or he has a particular problem, but I don't see this as a curve that's constantly declining and has a terminal date that can be anticipated," he said.

There have been periodic reports that Brezhnev's health is failing rapidly, and reporters who traveled to Moscow with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance early this year were struck by how his appearance had changed since earlier visits. Asked if he sees signs of a power struggle among Brezhnev's potential successors at the Kremlin, Turner said, "No, I don't read the signs that way at this point."

Social Security checks get sent to wrong places

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A computer mailed Social Security checks for 150,000 elderly disabled persons to the wrong addresses last week, a Treasury Dept. official said Sunday.

James Abbott, Treasury's chief disbursing officer, said there is no way to determine immediately how many checks reached their intended recipients — disabled persons ages 65 and over — in spite of the mistakes.

"Human error caused the computer to misdirect some payments," Abbott said in an interview.

"THE BEST estimate that Social Security is able to come up with is 150,000," he said. The misdirected checks were nationwide, not based on location.

"In these instances, where payments should have gone to the bank, they went to a home address," Abbott said. "And the reverse could have occurred in a few cases."

A Social Security Administration spokesman, Michael Naver, confirmed the mistake had occurred but said, "The error has been corrected."

He said recipients are being notified that future benefit checks will be properly deposited in checking accounts.

FOR RECIPIENTS WHO have not changed their addresses recently, Abbott said the error may have caused only the minor confusion of having a check delivered at the house instead of being recorded electronically at their bank.

And in some cases, persons who normally get their checks at home may not realize that the balance in their bank accounts was increased by the amount of their monthly payment.

But the real problem arises for beneficiaries who have moved. The Post Office may forward the checks or return them to the Treasury Dept.

Abbott said disabled recipients over age 65 who have not received a check for May should notify Social Security immediately.

He said the mistake occurred when the agency was trying to consolidate its records for disabled recipients over the age of 65.

DISABLED PERSONS are eligible for the same full benefits as those who collect their first payments after age 65.

But when a disabled worker reaches age 65, Abbott said, the disability records become inactive and Social Security tries to eliminate duplicate records for payments to recipients who were both disabled and age 65 or older.

The error in mailing addresses first showed up with the checks mailed for May, he said.

Abbott, the federal government's top check-writer, said his office disburses 675 million checks each year. Besides Social Security payments, it is responsible for payroll checks of civilian federal employes and income tax refunds.

Preparedness program a monstrosity: report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U. S. preparedness program against nuclear and natural disasters is an uncoordinated, "many-headed monstrosity" filled with duplication and neglect, says a congressional report released Sunday.

The comprehensive study of the government's emergency preparedness effort recommends consolidating three agencies which have responsibility — scattered among 175 interagency committees and groups — for protecting Americans against disasters ranging from hurricanes and floods to nuclear power plant meltdowns and atomic attack.

Thirty years of organizational changes and confusion has resulted "in an alphabet soup," said the report by the Joint Committee on Defense Production.

"Combine the emergency preparedness functions of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency, the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration and Federal Preparedness Agency into a single independent agency — the Federal Preparedness Administration — so as to provide centralized control and coordination of the many civil preparedness responsibilities of the federal government," it recommended.

SEN. WILLIAM Proxmire, D-Wis., who chairs the joint committee, said he will introduce legislation to consolidate "this many-headed monstrosity," improve program management and "to get the preparedness and relief money to stricken areas, where it belongs."

The civil preparedness report will be supplemented by a second part later this month dealing primarily with industrial defense against nuclear attack.

It comes at a time when the administration and Congress are devoting more attention to civil defense after years of neglect and in light of reports that the Soviet Union already has an elaborate system to protect much of its population and industry in the event of nuclear war.

The House last month approved a $134.8 million civil defense budget for fiscal 1978, almost 50 per cent over the current appropriation.

THE REPORT SAID directions from the various federal agencies and expense sharing with state, city and town governments have become so confused that lower level officials who want to cooperate don't know what to do.

"The changes in the federal preparedness system between 1973 and 1976 represent the politicizing of the preparedness effort," the panel said.

Patricia Hearst to be sentenced on charges today

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Patricia Hearst, the newspaper heiress who was first a captive and then a member of an underground terrorist group, is to be sentenced today for robbery and assault with a deadly weapon.

Miss Hearst, 23, faces possible penalties ranging from life in prison to probation. Under a new California law which goes into effect in July, she could be sentenced to 11 years.

The charges, two of the 11 for which she was originally indicted, stem from a 1974 incident at a sporting goods store in Inglewood.

MISS HEARST, who is free on $1.2 million bail while appealing a federal bank robbery conviction in San Francisco, pleaded "no contest" to the two charges here April 18.

The plea, entered with the Latin phrase "nolo contendere," means she is not liable to civil suits growing out of the charges. The other counts in the indictment, five counts of assault, two of robbery and two of kidnapping, were dropped.

She previously had pleaded innocent to all 11 counts of the indictment. The two counts to which she pleaded no contest involved a robbery of Mel's Sporting Goods in Inglewood in which she sprayed the store front with machine gun fire to permit the escape of Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris.

THE HARRISES were tried separately on the same 11 counts, found guilty and sentenced to 11 years to life.

PATRICIA HEARST

At the time of Miss Hearst's plea before Superior Court Judge E. Talbot Callister, prosecutor Samuel Mayerson said no deal was made for leniency in sentencing.

Her attorney, Albert Johnson, refused to say why the decision was made to enter the no contest plea. He told the court the defendant was prepared for sentencing at that time, but Judge Callister said he wanted to see a probation report and set the sentencing for May 9.

Patricia Hearst to be sentenced on charges today

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Patricia Hearst, the newspaper heiress who was first a captive and then a member of an underground terrorist group, is to be sentenced today for robbery and assault with a deadly weapon.

Miss Hearst, 23, faces possible penalties ranging from life in prison to probation. Under a new California law which goes into effect in July, she could be sentenced to 11 years.

The charges, two of the 11 for which she was originally indicted, stem from a 1974 incident at a sporting goods store in Inglewood.

MISS HEARST, who is free on $1.2 million bail while appealing a federal bank robbery conviction in San Francisco, pleaded "no contest" to the two charges here April 18.

The plea, entered with the Latin phrase "nolo contendere," means she is not liable to civil suits growing out of the charges. The other counts in the indictment, five counts of assault, two of robbery and two of kidnapping, were dropped.

She previously had pleaded innocent to all 11 counts of the indictment. The two counts to which she pleaded no contest involved a robbery of Mel's Sporting Goods in Inglewood in which she sprayed the store front with machine gun fire to permit the escape of Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris.

THE HARRISES were tried separately on the same 11 counts, found guilty and sentenced to 11 years to life.

PATRICIA HEARST

At the time of Miss Hearst's plea before Superior Court Judge E. Talbot Callister, prosecutor Samuel Mayerson said no deal was made for leniency in sentencing.

Her attorney, Albert Johnson, refused to say why the decision was made to enter the no contest plea. He told the court the defendant was prepared for sentencing at that time, but Judge Callister said he wanted to see a probation report and set the sentencing for May 9.

Her fear of flying is well grounded

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Grace Griffith owes her life to superstition.

In 1962 she had a reservation on a Northwest Orient Air Lines flight to Florida, but she wouldn't get on the plane because the coin-operated flight insurance machine was broken.

"That plane went down over Tell City, Indiana, and everyone on board was killed! Now I'm a believer," she said.

Grace Griffith not only owes her life to superstition, she owes her living as well. Mrs. Griffith sells flight insurance at a booth in O'Hare International Airport for the Continental Insurance Company.

O'Hare doesn't have the coin-operated machines anymore, although other airports do.

Mrs. Griffith freely admits her livelihood feeds on the fear of flying.

"It all is based on fear," she said.

There's a wide range of coverage available, with policies to fit your pocketbook and your degree of fear. The top limit is $375,000 of coverage for one round trip, costing $11.25 for domestic flights and $12.50 overseas.

OR FOR just 25 cents, your spouse, lover or favorite charity will receive $7,500 if your flight hits the rocks.

Mrs. Griffith said there are two kinds of people who buy flight insurance. The first kind is aware, responsible and concerned with providing financial security for their families.

"Then there are people who buy insurance as a good luck charm," she said.

"One guy came in and bought six or eight 50-cent policies because all the people in his office were betting on him. He sent one off to each of them.

"Another guy sent insurance policies to his girlfriends, insuring himself when he left town. If he had to break a date, he'd send her a policy to patch it up," she said.

SHE SAID more men than women buy flight insurance, but that this is simply because more men travel. She said women tend to buy larger policies than men, however.

"Men don't want to insure themselves too much, because they figure their wife will take the money and marry somebody else," Mrs. Griffith said.

Mutual of Omaha is the only other insurance company that sells flight insurance at O'Hare airport. Its range of coverage is more limited than Continental's, with policies from $60,000 to $150,000, costing from two to five dollars per round trip, company spokeswoman Terry Calek said.

Mutual of Omaha policies cover you only while you are on the airplane, but Continental policies cover you the entire time you are in the airport as well. Both companies sell additional policies that cover you throughout your trip, including hotel stays.

MS. CALEK estimated her company will have to pay $1.5 million to the beneficiaries of policy holders who were killed in the recent Canary Islands crash.

She said the number of people who take out flight insurance is growing, but not necessarily because of an increase in airline crashes. She said Mutual of Omaha did not notice a big jump in insurance sales after the Canary Islands crash.

Mrs. Griffith said her business "definitely" increases after major airline crashes, such as the Canary Islands crash.

"Airline crashes, especially when they're as horrifying as that one, increase business," she said.

SHE SAID she can sympathize with people who are afraid of flying, although she has become less frightened herself since she started selling insurance.

"Working here I've become acquainted with a lot of people who fly. They don't want to die any more than any of the rest of us, you know?" she said.

"The thing that bothers me the most is that it's a vehicle that I'm not in control of. And I can't see what's coming," she said. "Structurally, I don't understand airplanes."

Air crash settlements vary

All plane crashes are not created equal, at least when it comes to collecting damages for death and injury.

The mount of money collected varies according to where the plane crashed, how the passenger was ticketed, the ultimate destination and where the lawsuit was filed.

The families of victims of the same commercial air crash may find themselves with drastically different settlements, even though they were flying on the same plane and can prove the same loss.

Attorney John J. Kennelly, a specialist in airline disaster litigation, says the laws often appear to be "stranger than fiction." If not arbitrary.

Kennelly cites the example of the man who buys a single ticket to fly from Des Moines to London via Chicago and is killed while enroute to Chicago. Courts have ruled this is "international travel" and limited the family to damages of $75,000.

The family of another passenger on the same plane, also enroute to London but with separate tickets, could recover full damages without limitation.

The basic agreement governing international travel liability is the Warsaw Convention, which limits damages to a remarkably low $9,000. This treaty, signed in 1929 when aviation was in its infancy, is still applicable except when there is a "contact" with the United States.

Most American travel abroad, however, is covered under the Montreal Agreement, approved in 1966 under pressure from the United States. It is a voluntary agreement by the airlines to increase their liability to $75,000 for flights flying from or to the United States.

UNDER THE Montreal Agreement, families of victims don't have to prove negligence to collect the $75,000, but can collect more if they can prove "willful misconduct."

These varying agreements have led to strange settlements, but domestic accidents have an equally strange history. in this country, 10 states have a monetary limit on damage for a wrongful death. These limits range from $110,000 in West Virginia to $25,000 in Oregon.

MOST STATES have no limits, and the family of a victim will usually do better in such states. Awards in domestic accidents have ranged as high as several million dollars.

Some of the quirks in domestic air disaster law include the Death on the High Seas Act, which removes all liability limits for accidents in the ocean more than 3.45 miles from shore.

This law, however, does not apply to accidents within the 3.45 mile limit or a crash in a large lake.

The only sure way to have coverage in case of death is to take out an insurance policy.

plane crashes a year in commercial avaiation, but only about six result in fatalities. The crashes, however, get a lot of attention because large numbers of people can be killed in a single accident.

In the early days of aviation, most air crashes involved a mechanical failure, but NTSB figures show this is no longer true.

"Over the past 30 years the emphasis has changed gradually," said NTSB spokesman Edward Slattery. "Thirty years ago, most of our crashes involved some kind of mechanical failure. Lately in the past five years it has become more and more apparent that the weakest link in air safety is the human element."

SLATTERY SAID the pilot is "casually involved" in about 52 per cent of all commerical airline accidents. "I would say one of the highest percentage areas would be approaches to airports in bad weather," he said, noting weather is involved about 40 per cent of the time.

NTSB inquiries have found that air traffic controllers and mechanics are also part of "the human element" that contributes to accidents.

Since mechanical failure is rarely to blame, Slattery said the safety board does not compile listings on which planes have the worst safety record. He said accidents are usually luck of the draw, with some years being worse than others.

It is also difficult to rank airlines according to safety, although statistics are available. the size of air fleets, number of flights and "the human element" vary too much to make statistical comparisons conclusive.

Over the past five years, for example, Pan American World Airways has the worst record, with five fatal accidents causing a total of 285 deaths. This does not include the recent Canary Islands disaster which left nearly 600 dead.

EASTERN AIRLINES had four crashes with 283 fatalities while Trans World Airlines had three accidents with 181 fatalities.

Both Continental Airlines and Braniff International Airways survived the past five years without a single fatal accident.

Of the big three airlines, American and United both had good records, with only one fatal air accident each — during the past five years. In 1972, a United accident left 45 dead, while 37 died in a 1976 American accident.

O'Hare Airport, the world's busiest airport handling nearly 16 million passengers a year, has an unusually good safety record. Pilots say this is because of the high quality air traffic controllers working O'Hare field.

"O'Hare is probably one of the finest if not the finest controlled airport in the United States," said pilot Vince Swinney, of the Air Lines Pilots Assn. "One reason is the professionalism of the controllers. The controllers are just exceptionally good at O'Hare."

ANOTHER REASON is that pilots landing at O'Hare don't have to worry about physical obstacles like mountains. The land is flat, the buildings are relatively small and there are no ocean fogs.

There have been three major crashes in the history of O'Hare. The first, in 1961, involved a Northwest Orient Airlines plane that crashed just west of the airport after takeoff. The cause of the crash was mechanical failure. Thirty-seven people were killed.

The second crash occurred Dec. 27, 1968, when a North Central Airlines plane crashed into a hangar on landing, killing 27 people.

The latest air disaster at O'Hare cost 10 people their lives in 1972 when a North Central and a Delta plane collided on the runway.

"When you consider the tremendous number of aircraft that come and go, O'Hare has an excellent safety record," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Neal Callahan.

'Reluctant to get on a plane'

can't fly,' " Ojankangas remembers.

Thomas Stoll of Holmes Beach, Fla., doesn't have the problem to that degree. His work demands a lot of air travel. He was on the Delta plane that was involved in the 1972 crash and is still taking medication for injuries he received.

But he now arranges his vacations so that he can get to them by car if he can and flies "as little as possible." It wasn't always that way.

"Beforehand, I loved to fly," he recalls. "I'm very reluctant to get on a plane now."

THE OVERLOOKED emotional problems that accompany air crashes takes years to overcome. For some it takes longer.

Dean Vombrack of Des Plaines says it didn't take him long. When he first flew off to college in Omaha a few years ago, he says, he felt a little anxiety "but I imagine everybody feels some of that."

Back on Dec. 27, 1968, he was a 14-year-old member of the Des Plaines Vanguards, a color guard unit sponsored by the American Legion; because of flu and the holidays, only eight members of the 100-plus unit were on hand for the regular practice at an O'Hare hangar that day.

There was a loud noise that day and then a North Central jet crashed through the hangar door, fuel and flames spurting from the fuselage. Vombrack suffered burns over almost 30 per cent of his body as a result.

And it was back when he was living with his parents close to the airport that he suffered most of what he calls his "paranoia." It had nothing to do with flying.

"I was pretty paranoid," he remembers, "about not seeing a plane that I could hear."

In some ways, the emotions can be converted to dollars.

Mrs. Harry Darby of Baker, Ore., still becomes emotional when she remembers the way her daughter Darly Ann died.

She was heading for Madison, Wis., in December 1972 where she was going to meet her fiance, a ministerial intern.

The couple planned to drive from their to Missouri where their engagement was to be announced at a family get-together.

DARLY ANN never made it, however. She was aboard the North Central plane that collided on the runway with the Delta jet.

While a number of the claims resulting from that crash are still in litigation and others were settled out of court two or three years later, Mrs. Darby settled in April 1973.

She refuses to name the amount, but it was small. She and her husband saw no reason to ask for a lot, and they couldn't bear to drag out the affair.

"Money isn't that important. Nobody can ever pay for the loss," Mrs. Darby observes. "We were willing to accept what we could get rather than go through court. I think we didn't want to go through a lot about it."

Stoll, on the other hand, still hasn't settled. He refuses to discuss the specifics of the case because it is still in litigation, but sometimes he wonders if it will ever end.

"We are tied up with their insurance company," he says. "I just don't know what's going to happen with this. I don't know how long it's going to go."

OJANKANGAS settled out of court within a matter of months.

While he was in the hospital, a friend called to tell him, "Don't sign anything because there are possibilities here that should be looked at."

But Ojankangas wasn't interested in making a huge profit from the ordeal. While many accident victims receive five-digit settlements, Ojankangas just tallied the material he lost on the plane.

He teaches geology, and he had a lot of slides he had collected from Puerto Rico and California. To replace them, he figured out what it would cost to return to those locations.

The total added up to $6,200.

He filed it. Then he heard back from the insurance agent. He wrote back. They wrote back.

"They refused to give it," Ojankangas says. "Finally, they said, 'We'll give you $5,000 or nothing, so we took it.

"I wasn't about to go to court for the difference, that $1,200. It just bugged me. It really bugged me because this was no inflated figure."

OTHERS PLAYED the waiting game. Vombrack and Keith Carlson, a victim in the Vanguard crash who now lives in Arlington Heights, each settled for about $75,000 after a two year wait.

The key to those settlements came with the court verdict on the major claim. Once that plaintiff won, Carlson says, the airline began settling claims out of court.

He doesn't believe he had been affected by the accident psychologically. He has no fears and does not replay the nightmare in his mind.

But, he concedes, pulling through it despite burns on his back, face, arms and a leg may have given him a false feeling of indestructability. He has been in a couple of auto mishaps since, Carlson observes, and last summer apparently fell asleep at the wheel while driving through Pennsylvania. The car flipped over, but he escaped unharmed.

"If anything," he says, "I think I've gotten more disregard for life. I don't think I'll be hurt if I'm in an accident."

For Ojankangas, the reverse is true.

"One of my immediate aftereffects was a much deeper appreciation for life," he observes.

OH, HE ADDS, there are times when he probably gets in too much of a rush, when he gets ticked off at dumb little things, but when those moments come, he says, "I try to tell myself this is stupid."

It is during those times that he reflects on how close he came and on how fragile life is, and then he remembers a bit of advice passed on to him after the mishap.

"One of my friends told me," Ojankangas says softly, " 'The Lord must have had more work for you to do.

" 'Take your time to do it.' "

The mount of money collected varies according to where the plane crashed, how the passenger was ticketed, the ultimate destination and where the lawsuit was filed.

The families of victims of the same commercial air crash may find themselves with drastically different settlements, even though they were flying on the same plane and can prove the same loss.

Attorney John J. Kennelly, a specialist in airline disaster litigation, says the laws often appear to be "stranger than fiction." If not arbitrary.

Kennelly cites the example of the man who buys a single ticket to fly from Des Moines to London via Chicago and is killed while enroute to Chicago. Courts have ruled this is "international travel" and limited the family to damages of $75,000.

The family of another passenger on the same plane, also enroute to London but with separate tickets, could recover full damages without limitation.

The basic agreement governing international travel liability is the Warsaw Convention, which limits damages to a remarkably low $9,000. This treaty, signed in 1929 when aviation was in its infancy, is still applicable except when there is a "contact" with the United States.

Most American travel abroad, however, is covered under the Montreal Agreement, approved in 1966 under pressure from the United States. It is a voluntary agreement by the airlines to increase their liability to $75,000 for flights flying from or to the United States.

UNDER THE Montreal Agreement, families of victims don't have to prove negligence to collect the $75,000, but can collect more if they can prove "willful misconduct."

These varying agreements have led to strange settlements, but domestic accidents have an equally strange history. in this country, 10 states have a monetary limit on damage for a wrongful death. These limits range from $110,000 in West Virginia to $25,000 in Oregon.

MOST STATES have no limits, and the family of a victim will usually do better in such states. Awards in domestic accidents have ranged as high as several million dollars.

Some of the quirks in domestic air disaster law include the Death on the High Seas Act, which removes all liability limits for accidents in the ocean more than 3.45 miles from shore.

This law, however, does not apply to accidents within the 3.45 mile limit or a crash in a large lake.

The only sure way to have coverage in case of death is to take out an insurance policy.

plane crashes a year in commercial avaiation, but only about six result in fatalities. The crashes, however, get a lot of attention because large numbers of people can be killed in a single accident.

In the early days of aviation, most air crashes involved a mechanical failure, but NTSB figures show this is no longer true.

"Over the past 30 years the emphasis has changed gradually," said NTSB spokesman Edward Slattery. "Thirty years ago, most of our crashes involved some kind of mechanical failure. Lately in the past five years it has become more and more apparent that the weakest link in air safety is the human element."

SLATTERY SAID the pilot is "casually involved" in about 52 per cent of all commerical airline accidents. "I would say one of the highest percentage areas would be approaches to airports in bad weather," he said, noting weather is involved about 40 per cent of the time.

NTSB inquiries have found that air traffic controllers and mechanics are also part of "the human element" that contributes to accidents.

Since mechanical failure is rarely to blame, Slattery said the safety board does not compile listings on which planes have the worst safety record. He said accidents are usually luck of the draw, with some years being worse than others.

It is also difficult to rank airlines according to safety, although statistics are available. the size of air fleets, number of flights and "the human element" vary too much to make statistical comparisons conclusive.

Over the past five years, for example, Pan American World Airways has the worst record, with five fatal accidents causing a total of 285 deaths. This does not include the recent Canary Islands disaster which left nearly 600 dead.

EASTERN AIRLINES had four crashes with 283 fatalities while Trans World Airlines had three accidents with 181 fatalities.

Both Continental Airlines and Braniff International Airways survived the past five years without a single fatal accident.

Of the big three airlines, American and United both had good records, with only one fatal air accident each — during the past five years. In 1972, a United accident left 45 dead, while 37 died in a 1976 American accident.

O'Hare Airport, the world's busiest airport handling nearly 16 million passengers a year, has an unusually good safety record. Pilots say this is because of the high quality air traffic controllers working O'Hare field.

"O'Hare is probably one of the finest if not the finest controlled airport in the United States," said pilot Vince Swinney, of the Air Lines Pilots Assn. "One reason is the professionalism of the controllers. The controllers are just exceptionally good at O'Hare."

ANOTHER REASON is that pilots landing at O'Hare don't have to worry about physical obstacles like mountains. The land is flat, the buildings are relatively small and there are no ocean fogs.

There have been three major crashes in the history of O'Hare. The first, in 1961, involved a Northwest Orient Airlines plane that crashed just west of the airport after takeoff. The cause of the crash was mechanical failure. Thirty-seven people were killed.

The second crash occurred Dec. 27, 1968, when a North Central Airlines plane crashed into a hangar on landing, killing 27 people.

The latest air disaster at O'Hare cost 10 people their lives in 1972 when a North Central and a Delta plane collided on the runway.

"When you consider the tremendous number of aircraft that come and go, O'Hare has an excellent safety record," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Neal Callahan.

can't fly,' " Ojankangas remembers.

Thomas Stoll of Holmes Beach, Fla., doesn't have the problem to that degree. His work demands a lot of air travel. He was on the Delta plane that was involved in the 1972 crash and is still taking medication for injuries he received.

But he now arranges his vacations so that he can get to them by car if he can and flies "as little as possible." It wasn't always that way.

"Beforehand, I loved to fly," he recalls. "I'm very reluctant to get on a plane now."

THE OVERLOOKED emotional problems that accompany air crashes takes years to overcome. For some it takes longer.

Dean Vombrack of Des Plaines says it didn't take him long. When he first flew off to college in Omaha a few years ago, he says, he felt a little anxiety "but I imagine everybody feels some of that."

Back on Dec. 27, 1968, he was a 14-year-old member of the Des Plaines Vanguards, a color guard unit sponsored by the American Legion; because of flu and the holidays, only eight members of the 100-plus unit were on hand for the regular practice at an O'Hare hangar that day.

There was a loud noise that day and then a North Central jet crashed through the hangar door, fuel and flames spurting from the fuselage. Vombrack suffered burns over almost 30 per cent of his body as a result.

And it was back when he was living with his parents close to the airport that he suffered most of what he calls his "paranoia." It had nothing to do with flying.

"I was pretty paranoid," he remembers, "about not seeing a plane that I could hear."

In some ways, the emotions can be converted to dollars.

Mrs. Harry Darby of Baker, Ore., still becomes emotional when she remembers the way her daughter Darly Ann died.

She was heading for Madison, Wis., in December 1972 where she was going to meet her fiance, a ministerial intern.

The couple planned to drive from their to Missouri where their engagement was to be announced at a family get-together.

DARLY ANN never made it, however. She was aboard the North Central plane that collided on the runway with the Delta jet.

While a number of the claims resulting from that crash are still in litigation and others were settled out of court two or three years later, Mrs. Darby settled in April 1973.

She refuses to name the amount, but it was small. She and her husband saw no reason to ask for a lot, and they couldn't bear to drag out the affair.

"Money isn't that important. Nobody can ever pay for the loss," Mrs. Darby observes. "We were willing to accept what we could get rather than go through court. I think we didn't want to go through a lot about it."

Stoll, on the other hand, still hasn't settled. He refuses to discuss the specifics of the case because it is still in litigation, but sometimes he wonders if it will ever end.

"We are tied up with their insurance company," he says. "I just don't know what's going to happen with this. I don't know how long it's going to go."

OJANKANGAS settled out of court within a matter of months.

While he was in the hospital, a friend called to tell him, "Don't sign anything because there are possibilities here that should be looked at."

But Ojankangas wasn't interested in making a huge profit from the ordeal. While many accident victims receive five-digit settlements, Ojankangas just tallied the material he lost on the plane.

He teaches geology, and he had a lot of slides he had collected from Puerto Rico and California. To replace them, he figured out what it would cost to return to those locations.

The total added up to $6,200.

He filed it. Then he heard back from the insurance agent. He wrote back. They wrote back.

"They refused to give it," Ojankangas says. "Finally, they said, 'We'll give you $5,000 or nothing, so we took it.

"I wasn't about to go to court for the difference, that $1,200. It just bugged me. It really bugged me because this was no inflated figure."

OTHERS PLAYED the waiting game. Vombrack and Keith Carlson, a victim in the Vanguard crash who now lives in Arlington Heights, each settled for about $75,000 after a two year wait.

The key to those settlements came with the court verdict on the major claim. Once that plaintiff won, Carlson says, the airline began settling claims out of court.

He doesn't believe he had been affected by the accident psychologically. He has no fears and does not replay the nightmare in his mind.

But, he concedes, pulling through it despite burns on his back, face, arms and a leg may have given him a false feeling of indestructability. He has been in a couple of auto mishaps since, Carlson observes, and last summer apparently fell asleep at the wheel while driving through Pennsylvania. The car flipped over, but he escaped unharmed.

"If anything," he says, "I think I've gotten more disregard for life. I don't think I'll be hurt if I'm in an accident."

For Ojankangas, the reverse is true.

"One of my immediate aftereffects was a much deeper appreciation for life," he observes.

OH, HE ADDS, there are times when he probably gets in too much of a rush, when he gets ticked off at dumb little things, but when those moments come, he says, "I try to tell myself this is stupid."

It is during those times that he reflects on how close he came and on how fragile life is, and then he remembers a bit of advice passed on to him after the mishap.

"One of my friends told me," Ojankangas says softly, " 'The Lord must have had more work for you to do.

" 'Take your time to do it.' "

Parish follows Council, worships 'the way it was'

by JOHN LAMPINEN

The sign that fronts the small red-brick building has been painted white except for the letters that spell "Church."

On one side, a handmade placard has been hung above the word. In dark block letters that are barely readable from the road because of their size, it says, "Shrine of St. Pius V."

The name is not fortuitous.

Pope Pius V ruled the Roman Catholic Church during the Reformation when the Council of Trent met to review and restate the church's rules and teachings. When the council delivered its report, it added: "This is what we are going to abide by till the end of time."

And that statement means everything to the people who go to church here.

ED KETTMANN is 59 and a retired Army veteran. He was brought up in the traditional Catholic faith, based on Council of Trent rulings.

Each Sunday morning, he gets up at 6:30 and leaves his Chicago home to catch the Chicago & North Western Ry. train. He takes the train as far as Des Plaines, where he is met by a friend.

Then the two of them drive the rest of the way to the church, tucked away in a wooded area of Lake Zurich just east of Ill. Rte. 12 and the exclusive, open spaces of North Barrington it borders.

Kettmann does not particularly like the drive. One suburb looks pretty much like another, at least until he gets to Long Grove. But it is the only way he knows of being able to worship in the traditional way he was taught he was supposed to worship.

"There is no use of taking second best. If I have to drive this far, I have to drive this far," he says. "Sunday is supposed to be a day of rest anyway. If I can't devote that to God, what can I?"

HE IS NOT the only one who travels long distances to get here. The cars that jam the dirt parking lot to the creek out back have vehicle stickers from towns such as Buffalo Grove and Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Hoffman Estates, Chicago and Cary.

One parishioner remembers the church even had visitors from Racine, Wis., a couple of weeks ago.

They used to meet in homes and civic halls in the Northwest suburbs. The congregation bought the building a little more than two months ago from the Lake Zurich Evangelical Free Church.

Inside, a small line of worshipers circles the foyer, waiting to get into the confessional in the front of the church. All of the women have coverings on their head. And when the Mass begins, the priest faces away from the pews, the way it used to be. The service is celebrated in Latin, the way it used to be.

Kettmann remembers when all Catholic churches used to be that way. And he remembers when the changes began coming. He says they sort of "snuck up on us every now and then," meat on Fridays, adjusting a few words in the services, then masses spoken in English.

"All of a sudden, we had all the changes, and no one knew why," he recalls.

HE TRIED, but he couldn't get used to it. After being told all his life that "this is the way it is," it was difficult to adjust.

"If we're going to be Catholics, to be universal, then we're going to have to be universal," Kettmann says. "Everything they're doing now (is) to destroy the church. I see it as a deliberate attempt to destroy the church from within."

The Rev. Stanley Wasylik, Sunday's visiting priest, is 65. He says, the changes are confusing the people, they are causing them to doubt and there are few if any "shepherds" within the Church ready to lead them.

"There's no power on this earth (that) can infringe on God's law. It is a natural law," he says. "There is going to be a schism in the church because of all this. If the bishops don't wake up, they're going to be the cause of this schism."

And now, at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, there is talk of loosening the Church's restrictions on divorce, talk of eliminating the excommunication penalty imposed on couples who divorce.

FOR KETTMANN, it is just another change that makes him wonder about the direction the Church is heading.

"I can't see that divorce thing," the Rev. Wasylik says. "You are touching on a statement that Christ made himself, the permanency of marriage."

However, the divorce issue is one on which even the members of St. Pius cannot agree.

Carol Von Albracht of Northbrook says the penalties on divorce have always been a "kind of Catch 22." The United States has been the only country since the late 1800s where divorced Catholics have been subject to ex-communication. But if a person is ex-communicated, she asks, how can he ever be absolved?

However, Tony Elias of Elmwood Park views the issue much the way he views other changes going on within the Church.

"It is more or less a foot in the door to dilute the traditional Catholic faith," he says. "The Church should be steadfast. It should not be in casters, moving back and forth to the whims of the country at that time."

KETTMANN SHAKES his head as he recalls that every time a change is made, the hierarchy says it was made because the people demanded it. He has never heard anyone ask for these "radical changes," he says.

Thoughts on a Matress

What's in a name? "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet" is a famous quotation.

In mattresses, the magic name is "Orthopedic."

Did you ever ask yourself what an Orthopedic mattress is? Apparently, the Government experts couldn't figure it out either. A few years ago the Federal Trade Commission made the mattress manufacturers stop using the term "Orthopedic" on their mattresses and in their advertising.

So the big mattress makers started calling their mattresses "This-A-Pedic," "That-A-Pedic," "Whose-A-Pedic," "What's-A-Pedic" — I guess they figured a mattress by any other name would smell as sweet!

We think our customers might like to name their own mattresses. If they want a glamorous mattress, we'll call it "Cleopatra." If they want a sexy mattress, we'll call it "Marilyn." If they want a famous orthopedic type mattress, we'll call it "Doctor Ortho." If they just want a famous name, we'll call in Napoleon, or Joan of Arc, or Einstein.

Whatever they call it, we will still make it with the same quality materials and careful workmanship that we put into all of our mattresses. We still think the first requirement of a good mattress is to give a comfortable night's sleep.

So the big mattress makers started calling their mattresses "This-A-Pedic," "That-A-Pedic," "Whose-A-Pedic," "What's-A-Pedic" — I guess they figured a mattress by any other name would smell as sweet!

We think our customers might like to name their own mattresses. If they want a glamorous mattress, we'll call it "Cleopatra." If they want a sexy mattress, we'll call it "Marilyn." If they want a famous orthopedic type mattress, we'll call it "Doctor Ortho." If they just want a famous name, we'll call in Napoleon, or Joan of Arc, or Einstein.

Whatever they call it, we will still make it with the same quality materials and careful workmanship that we put into all of our mattresses. We still think the first requirement of a good mattress is to give a comfortable night's sleep.

Senior buses need economies

The Palatine Township Board has come to the financial rescue of the township senior citizen bus service by agreeing to spend up to $400 a week to continue the service.

The Senior Citizens Council had said without the financial aid the bus service would have been suspended indefinitely May 6 because of insufficient funds. They blamed mechanical problems, increased usage and insurance premiums for the drain on funds.

The board's action ensures that this valuable service to senior citizens will be continued through June 6 when funding for the bus service again will be considered.

The reprieve for the bus service will give officials of the senior citizens council and township a chance to explore ways of improving the efficiency and cutting the costs of the service.

Figures show that the average monthly ridership in Palatine Township is 589 at a cost of $2.93 per rider. Similar bus services for senior citizens in Wheeling Township cost $1.98 per rider and in Elk Grove Township $2.12 per rider.

Wheeling Township has had success cutting the cost of its bus service by using a route system three days a week and the dial-a-bus system the other two days. Palatine Township now exclusively uses the dial-a-bus system that picks senior citizens up at their door.

Other towns also have had success with subsidized taxi programs in which the senior citizen pays 50 cents and the governmental body pays $1 of the cab fare.

Both the bus route system and the subsidized taxi program should be explored for Palatine Township.

This also would be a good time for officials from Wheeling, Elk Grove and Palatine townships to discuss combining their bus services to provide an area-wide transportation system for senior citizens. This would eliminate the problem of buses not being able to cross township lines, as from one part of Mount Prospect to another, and provide a better service to senior citizens.

The township funded transportation programs for senior citizens are needed, but methods to improve their efficiency, cut costs and at the same time improve the service to senior citizens need further investigation.

A dramatic inspiration

Most kids are lucky if they find one inspiring teacher in their time in school. And most teachers are fortunate if they can feel some responsibility for one impressive success story.

Patricia Lewkowicz, drama teacher at Prospect High School, has inspired her share of students, and her track record at helping success along is impressive.

She has been teaching at Prospect since 1965. And right now she can point to quite a few former students who are making careers in show business and who credit her for the inspiration that got them started.

One, Bruce Boxleitner, will co-star in the upcoming mini-series "How the West Was Won" on ABC-TV. Another, Sophia Andoniadis, opened recently in an off-Broadway play. Others work behind the scenes or are still trying to break into the big time.

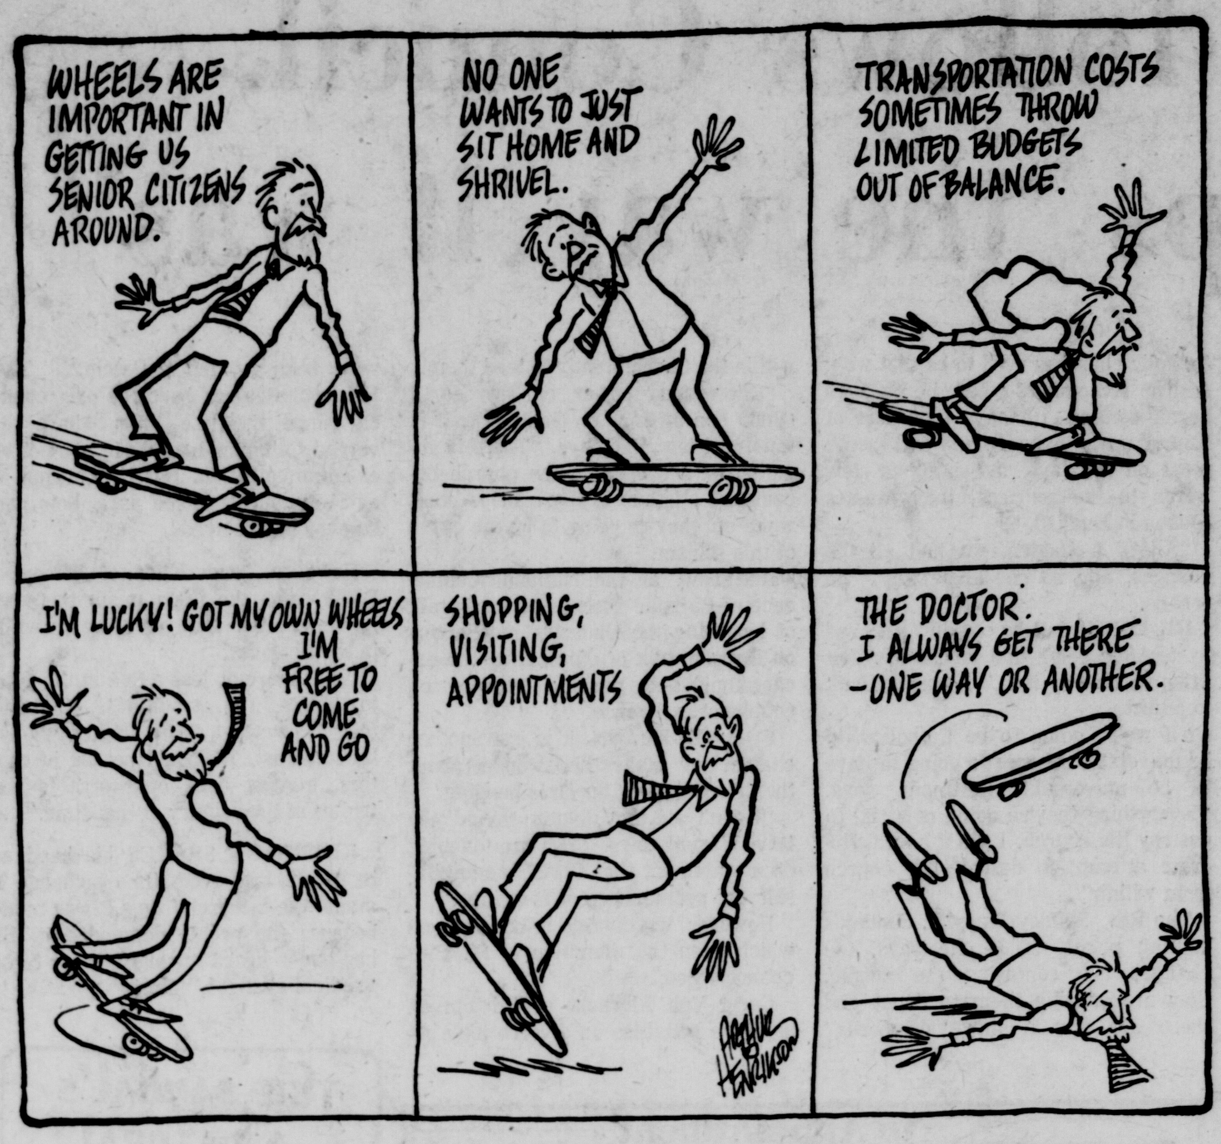

But even if not one Lewkowicz-trained actor ever wins an Oscar or a Tony, even if the success her students have experienced so far marks the high point, Patricia Lewkowicz will be a notable success.

Her goal, she says, is not to create stars. "I'm building people first and stars second," she says.

That is a worthy goal for any teacher.

Our comments on the controversy about X-rated movies at the Meadows Theatre in Rolling Meadows.

Exclusive interview with William H. Olderfella Sr.

Firemen gain supporters

On Tuesday, April 26, I attended the Rolling Meadows council meeting in which our part-time fire fighters walked out as a group because of the fact they have not received any response from our city aldermen. The scene was very distressing to me, for I personally and many other citizens who were in attendance at the meeting are getting a little tired of the workers of our city being pushed around unnecessarily by non-responsive members of the city council.

Many of these men I have known for many years, many I know personally. When the city was young many gave their time freely without monetary gain and asked nothing more than to serve the community they were proud of. Many of these gentlemen helped build our city fire department.

Now, they have to come hat in hand and beg for reconsideration of an ordinance, which I myself think was not handled properly. The aldermen would have never acted in this manner if our part-time firemen or our fire fighters or any and all of our city workers were represented by a union.

Why do they constantly drive our faithful city workers and force them to seek help from outside sources. We have one of the finest police departments, fire departments and without a doubt the finest city workers in any city or village in this area and we continuously harass the workers of our city. Without these many fine services which we receive from the city and the dedicated men and women we have working for the city, we would not have to worry about having the little shopping center or churches or anything that helps make life a little more luxurious for all of us.

First we kick them around for nine months without a pay raise, after making all kinds of promises to them, and then the city council did not give them the full amount they were asking for, which was far below our inflationary rates. And yet, these same gentlemen who sat as aldermen of our city voted in a city manager that will cost us approximately $35,000 per year in salary, plus exclusive use of an automobile. If he and his family want to take a 3,000 mile vacation and decide to drive, the taxpayers of the city would pay for his transportation, plus many other unrestricted benefits.

I would like to leave a quote with our council from Albert Einstein, which I think is very fitting in closing this letter. "Many times a day I realize how my own outer and inner life is built upon the labors of my fellowman, both living and dead, and how earnestly I must exert myself to return as much as I have received."

IT IS A SAD DAY when a man who is here today because some men answered a call yesterday is unconcerned whether calls are answered or not. He owes his life to their response and training. He is still Fire Chief Fogarty because of it.

I understand the root of the problem with the firemen is a fast bill written, almost silently and passed by the city council.

Maybe it's a neat way to save money. Maybe it's the now thing. But is the saving of a few dollars worth worry and loss of lives?

We, the untrained, depend upon the trained for protection. If they are not there in time of need, what then? Do I use my own hose to put my fire out? Do I stand and watch someone die because I don't drive nor know what to do?

Why do we have a fire department in this city? City council, grow up before it's too late.

She hits throwaway bottle plan

I wish to take exception to the editorial in the April 29 Herald that the bill to ban non-returnable cans and bottles now before the General Assembly is one to be approved.

May I respectfully suggest you don't have the full picture of what passage of this bill could really accomplish.

This bill will not appreciably cut down on the litter problem, because litter caused by beverage containers is only a small percentage of the throwaway problem. Most beer and soft drinks are consumed indoors and on the premises of eating establishments.

You mention Oregon's similar legislation as a grand example. It should be mentioned that Oregon has had only a 10.6 per cent drop in their total litter problem, whereas states like Washington, that have looked at the broader range of littering, have accomplished a 60 per cent reduction in total litter in three years.

Any of the cities in the nation adopting the Clean Community System program (which includes broad public education, refuse-collection-machinery and litter baskets and strong enforcement of litter laws) have noted even higher litter reductions. Example: Tampa, Fla., 73 per cent less; Charlotte, N.C., 71 per cent; and Evansville, Ind., 40.3 per cent less in just the last year.

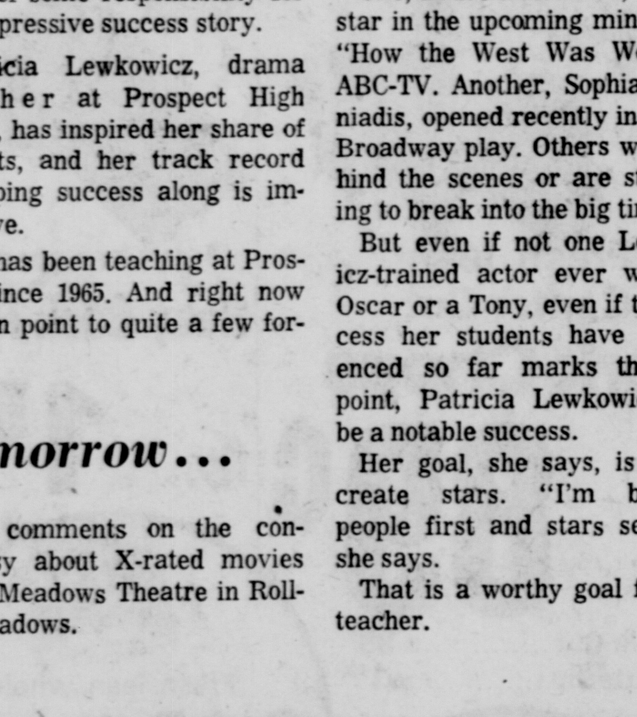

Also, unlike Oregon, Illinois has a sizeable work force employed in the beverage container industry. Passage of this bill would have the ultimate effect of eliminating a substantial number of skilled and semi-skilled jobs. We don't need any more unemployment in Illinois.

I hope our representatives will think on these points too as they decide which way to cast their votes on the "Bottle Bill."

Norma Murphy
Arlington Heights

P.S. Incidentally, as to your editorial on lobbying, I heartily agree with your opinion that the measure for reforming lobbying rules is a good step forward.

Poisoned idealism Nixon's legacy

by ARNOLD SAWISLAK
(Commentary)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For one brief moment during his Watergate interview with David Frost, Richard Nixon addressed himself to what could be the worst thing he and his men did to the country.

"I let down our system of government and the dreams of all those young people that ought to get into government, but who now will think it's all too corrupt," he said.

Most of the rest of the 90 minutes was spent by Frost trying to get Nixon to admit he had committed crimes and Nixon denying it. It was interesting in a macabre way, but of little consequence. Even if he did break the law, Nixon has a pardon covering it, and the country has gone on to other concerns.

BUT THERE IS a legacy, and Nixon gave only that fleeting sign that he understands it. Yet that alone — the enshrinement of political cynicism — could be what Nixon is remembered for.

His foreign policy accomplishments notwithstanding, Nixon could be the president whose monument will depict him poisoning the wells of idealism.

It would be nonsense to contend that Nixon corrupted a clean political system. American elective politics always have been dirty, and 1972 was not the first time the presidency has been abused in its practice.

BUT THERE WAS something new and profoundly depressing in what happened after the Nixon campaign got caught playing dirty politics. The president's supporters, and last week the former president himself, took the position that unethical conduct in seeking public office was the norm. When all the other excuses were stripped away, that was the defense.

Nixon told Frost that he had no intention to protect burglars and those who hired them. His concern, he said, "was not to cover up a criminal action." "My motive was pure political containment," Nixon said. "And, political containment is not a corrupt motive."

He was talking about the kind of thing for which a person can be sent to jail. But in defending his conduct with that line, he was clearly implying that it was proper to subvert the process by which Americans choose their public officials.

MURDER, RAPE and robbery are common in this country. We do not, however, accept these acts with the defense that "everyone is doing it." Nor, without the consequences that Nixon himself faintly seems to see, can this country acquiesce in the proposition that anything goes in the game of partisan politics.

Since Watergate, "reforms" have been written into the law to more closely regulate political campaign practices. Some improvement, at least on the surface, seems to be evident. To that extent, what happened at the Democratic National Committee headquarters June 17, 1972, and in the two years that followed, may have had a cleansing effect.

But as long as the phrase "post-Watergate morality" is more often used with a sneer than a tone of respect, we can be sure that the Nixon legacy to the American political system is intact.

Casinos will thrive along Boardwalk

The living room swayed. Steve Norton clutched an arm of his chair. Bill Kofoed steadied a tall drink. I pushed a half-glass of white wine away. It wasn't an earthquake.

We were aboard a sumptuous houseboat at Paradise Island in the Bahamas. It is feathered and furnished with deep-pile green rungs, a spiral staircase, a kitchen and two television sets which remain blank.

It comes to $230 a day. If you can split it three ways, it is worth a little rocking, especially in the middle of the night trying to find the bathroom.

STEVE NORTON was talking about Atlantic City. He is a youngish intense 40, a vice president of Resorts International. Kofoed is a top public relations executive who is also interested in Atlantic City.

More and more states are turning to controlled gambling as a source of additional revenue. New Jersey surprised the nation by voting to permit casinos at the one-time queen of beaches, Atlantic City.

Governor Brendan Byrne, who hit New Jersey with its first income tax, could run a popularity race with measles, and win. He chose to do what he thought was right rather than what was popular. Some Jersey voters hold out crooked fingers and say, "Governor Burn," not Byrne.

Norton spent the cold months studying Atlantic City, the governor and the legislature. Resorts International bought the old Chalfonte Haddon Hall as a future gambling casino. They expect to put five million more into redecorating the property.

THE BOARDWALK hotels are a nightmare. The Traymore, at one time the class of the beach, is gone. The shops on Atlantic and Pacific Avenues gasp for life. The boardwalk has survived thousands of storms. The beach is still one of the deepest and finest anywhere some concessions still sell salt water taffy.

When gambling becomes legal, Norton's feasibility study states that there will be 35,000 new jobs. The old hotels will be glittering with lights and dreamy music, new plumbing and fresh linen.

The big money of Las Vegas overreacted when New Jersey voted for casinos. "Gambling?" the hotel owners said. "You're going to see a lot of welfare checks, that's what you'll see."

Untrue. There is enough gaming money to keep the Bahamas, Las Vegas and Atlantic City in a happy frame of mind. Vegas will remain the gambling capital of the world. Sheiks fly all the way from Saudi Arabia to lose a half-million or more trying to outwit a silly pair of dice.

THE BAHAMAS does well with Florida tourists and Canadians. The Bahamas also attracts a lot of young couples. She enjoys the bells on the slot machines; he puts on a dead expression at the blackjack table.

Four airlines have requested the C.A.B. for permission to fly to Atlantic City. The city of Philadelphia has always looked upon Atlantic City as its personal summer resort. Three airports at New York will be flying shuttle service to the beach. They'll also be coming in from Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, and Chicago.

The big corporations are going to require a lot of Bill Kofoeds to resurrect the beach. The P.R. men will sell it as their confreres sold a chunk of desert in Nevada.

The New Jersey legislature has a half-dozen bills ready to clear the proper committees this month. The assembly and the state senate will reconcile their differences and the gaming act should be on the desk of Governor Byrne before summer vacations begin.

THE STATE HAS a couple of stipulations of its own. It wants an elegant, classy operation. It also wants 10 per cent of all casino profits. In return, it will grant the hotels a 2 per cent rebate with which to improve hotels and rooms.

So far, everyone appears to be content. The governor asked that gambling be reduced from 24 hours a day to 18. The new hotel owners decided not to fight it. The operation is so smooth that everybody is scared to death.

Norton stood to leave. "Remember when you and I played the King's Inn course at Freeport?" "Not if I didn't win, I don't," I said. Kofoed grinned. "Funny," he said. "The living room has stopped rocking.

This bill will not appreciably cut down on the litter problem, because litter caused by beverage containers is only a small percentage of the throwaway problem. Most beer and soft drinks are consumed indoors and on the premises of eating establishments.

You mention Oregon's similar legislation as a grand example. It should be mentioned that Oregon has had only a 10.6 per cent drop in their total litter problem, whereas states like Washington, that have looked at the broader range of littering, have accomplished a 60 per cent reduction in total litter in three years.

Any of the cities in the nation adopting the Clean Community System program (which includes broad public education, refuse-collection-machinery and litter baskets and strong enforcement of litter laws) have noted even higher litter reductions. Example: Tampa, Fla., 73 per cent less; Charlotte, N.C., 71 per cent; and Evansville, Ind., 40.3 per cent less in just the last year.

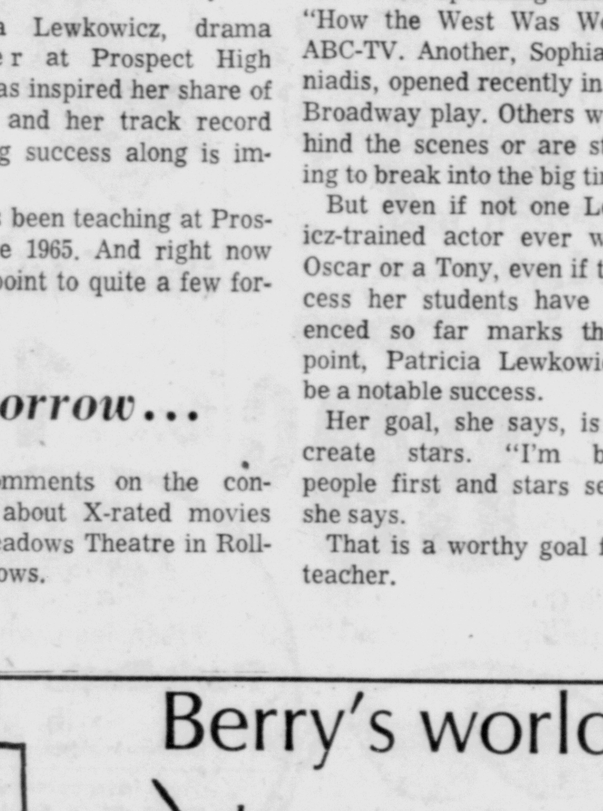

Also, unlike Oregon, Illinois has a sizeable work force employed in the beverage container industry. Passage of this bill would have the ultimate effect of eliminating a substantial number of skilled and semi-skilled jobs. We don't need any more unemployment in Illinois.

I hope our representatives will think on these points too as they decide which way to cast their votes on the "Bottle Bill."

Poisoned idealism Nixon's legacy

by ARNOLD SAWISLAK
(Commentary)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For one brief moment during his Watergate interview with David Frost, Richard Nixon addressed himself to what could be the worst thing he and his men did to the country.

"I let down our system of government and the dreams of all those young people that ought to get into government, but who now will think it's all too corrupt," he said.

Most of the rest of the 90 minutes was spent by Frost trying to get Nixon to admit he had committed crimes and Nixon denying it. It was interesting in a macabre way, but of little consequence. Even if he did break the law, Nixon has a pardon covering it, and the country has gone on to other concerns.

BUT THERE IS a legacy, and Nixon gave only that fleeting sign that he understands it. Yet that alone — the enshrinement of political cynicism — could be what Nixon is remembered for.

His foreign policy accomplishments notwithstanding, Nixon could be the president whose monument will depict him poisoning the wells of idealism.

It would be nonsense to contend that Nixon corrupted a clean political system. American elective politics always have been dirty, and 1972 was not the first time the presidency has been abused in its practice.

BUT THERE WAS something new and profoundly depressing in what happened after the Nixon campaign got caught playing dirty politics. The president's supporters, and last week the former president himself, took the position that unethical conduct in seeking public office was the norm. When all the other excuses were stripped away, that was the defense.

Nixon told Frost that he had no intention to protect burglars and those who hired them. His concern, he said, "was not to cover up a criminal action." "My motive was pure political containment," Nixon said. "And, political containment is not a corrupt motive."

He was talking about the kind of thing for which a person can be sent to jail. But in defending his conduct with that line, he was clearly implying that it was proper to subvert the process by which Americans choose their public officials.

MURDER, RAPE and robbery are common in this country. We do not, however, accept these acts with the defense that "everyone is doing it." Nor, without the consequences that Nixon himself faintly seems to see, can this country acquiesce in the proposition that anything goes in the game of partisan politics.

Since Watergate, "reforms" have been written into the law to more closely regulate political campaign practices. Some improvement, at least on the surface, seems to be evident. To that extent, what happened at the Democratic National Committee headquarters June 17, 1972, and in the two years that followed, may have had a cleansing effect.

But as long as the phrase "post-Watergate morality" is more often used with a sneer than a tone of respect, we can be sure that the Nixon legacy to the American political system is intact.

Casinos will thrive along Boardwalk

The living room swayed. Steve Norton clutched an arm of his chair. Bill Kofoed steadied a tall drink. I pushed a half-glass of white wine away. It wasn't an earthquake.

We were aboard a sumptuous houseboat at Paradise Island in the Bahamas. It is feathered and furnished with deep-pile green rungs, a spiral staircase, a kitchen and two television sets which remain blank.

It comes to $230 a day. If you can split it three ways, it is worth a little rocking, especially in the middle of the night trying to find the bathroom.

STEVE NORTON was talking about Atlantic City. He is a youngish intense 40, a vice president of Resorts International. Kofoed is a top public relations executive who is also interested in Atlantic City.

More and more states are turning to controlled gambling as a source of additional revenue. New Jersey surprised the nation by voting to permit casinos at the one-time queen of beaches, Atlantic City.

Governor Brendan Byrne, who hit New Jersey with its first income tax, could run a popularity race with measles, and win. He chose to do what he thought was right rather than what was popular. Some Jersey voters hold out crooked fingers and say, "Governor Burn," not Byrne.

Norton spent the cold months studying Atlantic City, the governor and the legislature. Resorts International bought the old Chalfonte Haddon Hall as a future gambling casino. They expect to put five million more into redecorating the property.

THE BOARDWALK hotels are a nightmare. The Traymore, at one time the class of the beach, is gone. The shops on Atlantic and Pacific Avenues gasp for life. The boardwalk has survived thousands of storms. The beach is still one of the deepest and finest anywhere some concessions still sell salt water taffy.

When gambling becomes legal, Norton's feasibility study states that there will be 35,000 new jobs. The old hotels will be glittering with lights and dreamy music, new plumbing and fresh linen.

The big money of Las Vegas overreacted when New Jersey voted for casinos. "Gambling?" the hotel owners said. "You're going to see a lot of welfare checks, that's what you'll see."

Untrue. There is enough gaming money to keep the Bahamas, Las Vegas and Atlantic City in a happy frame of mind. Vegas will remain the gambling capital of the world. Sheiks fly all the way from Saudi Arabia to lose a half-million or more trying to outwit a silly pair of dice.

THE BAHAMAS does well with Florida tourists and Canadians. The Bahamas also attracts a lot of young couples. She enjoys the bells on the slot machines; he puts on a dead expression at the blackjack table.

Four airlines have requested the C.A.B. for permission to fly to Atlantic City. The city of Philadelphia has always looked upon Atlantic City as its personal summer resort. Three airports at New York will be flying shuttle service to the beach. They'll also be coming in from Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, and Chicago.

The big corporations are going to require a lot of Bill Kofoeds to resurrect the beach. The P.R. men will sell it as their confreres sold a chunk of desert in Nevada.

The New Jersey legislature has a half-dozen bills ready to clear the proper committees this month. The assembly and the state senate will reconcile their differences and the gaming act should be on the desk of Governor Byrne before summer vacations begin.

THE STATE HAS a couple of stipulations of its own. It wants an elegant, classy operation. It also wants 10 per cent of all casino profits. In return, it will grant the hotels a 2 per cent rebate with which to improve hotels and rooms.

So far, everyone appears to be content. The governor asked that gambling be reduced from 24 hours a day to 18. The new hotel owners decided not to fight it. The operation is so smooth that everybody is scared to death.

Norton stood to leave. "Remember when you and I played the King's Inn course at Freeport?" "Not if I didn't win, I don't," I said. Kofoed grinned. "Funny," he said. "The living room has stopped rocking.

Bethlehem, U.S. Steel watched for price hike

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Government economists and industry leaders alike are watching United States Steel and Bethlehem Steel this week to see whether the nation's two top steel manufacturers will give sanction to a major price increase announced by smaller companies Friday.

There was no indication whether they would undercut the prices, an action that would likely make smaller increases the standard.

If the 7-9 per cent boosts on flat-rolled and bar steel by Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube hold in the marketplace, government economists say, the prices of autos, washing machines and other consumer goods will eventually rise as well.

PRESIDENT CARTER'S inflation policy announced April 15 calls for voluntary restraint by industry as an alternative to price controls.

Although the President attempted to "jawbone" the industry into rolling back a steel price increase last December before his inauguration, the only White House reaction so far came from the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

The Council, which does not have the authority to roll back prices but merely monitors pricing actions for the Administration, said it hoped the top producers would announce smaller boosts because the 7-9 per cent increases were inflationary.

"Any increase in the price of steel is going to raise the prices of products made with steel," said a government economist. "But how much is inevitable and how much can we avoid?"

WITH THE 8.8 PER cent boost on flat-rolled products, the price of the consumer-oriented steel would have risen 20.8 per cent in the last 12 months.

Steel officials say demand for steel is strong and thus believe increases will hold in the marketplace at this time.

Industry leaders claim they need a price increase because:

- Production materials are rising in cost;
- There is a relatively poor cost-profit margin on flat-rolled steel;
- A new pact with the United Steelworkers calls for an 80 cents an hour wage increase over three years;
- Industry leaders announced heavy first quarter declines, and even some losses;
- Alleged unfair trade practices opened the door for steel imports.

Famous Detroit deli may close as profits get sliced

DETROIT (UPI) — "Hamtramck Stanley" soon may be hanging up his last salami at the Broadway Market.

The 65-year-old downtown landmark, once a bustling center for sandwich, produce and ethnic food shops, is losing so much money its owners are offering to give it away.

For years, it thrived on the walk-in shopper trade. Most afternoons, customers would be packed in five and six deep at each counter.

NOW, NEARBY department stores either have shut down or are planning to close. Many of the office workers in the area have left either for the suburbs or the new $337 million Renaissance Center hotel-office complex a few blocks away.

At 4 p.m. Tuesday, there were just two customers in the Broadway Market. The delicatessen counter worker, who identifies himself only as "Hamtramck Stanley, the one and only," pointed to three salamis hanging on the wall.

"See those three salamis. There was a time when it was nothing for 50 salamis to be up behind the counter," said Stanley, a Broadway standby since 1937.

"We used to be hand-slicing bread and meat from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m."

The original market building was razed 10 years ago and turned into a parking lot. Some of the shop owners moved across the street, but business has been slipping for the past few years due to the downtown exodus and utility costs are mounting.

"WE'VE BEEN going into our own pockets for the last couple of years. It hasn't been economically feasible," said Alan May, one of the building's owners.

"Maybe someone else can do something with it," he said. "We've even offered it to the city as a gift."

The leases of the shop owners expire in October and most have indicated they do not plan to renew.

"I'd hate to see the Broadway Market close," said Mike Zuckman, manager of Lefkofsky's delicatessen. "So many other landmarks are gone."

Buses running again after 44-day strike

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The city's transit authority said Sunday bus, trolley and subway service would be restored completely by Monday for the first time since a bitter strike began March 25.

Work crews began reactivating the system early Sunday morning, hours after the 5,000-member Transport Workers Union local 234 agreed to end its 44-day strike by ratifying a two-year contract.

Partial service was restored by Sunday afternoon.

THE TRANSIT STRIKE, the longest in Philadelphia in 66 years, had forced 400,000 daily commuters to seek other means of transportation, resulting in massive traffic tie-ups and jammed commuter trains. It also cost city businesses an estimated $2.3 million daily in lost sales.

"I'm very pleased it's all over," said Mayor Frank D. Rizzo. "I'm very pleased the majority ratified the contract. This strike created discomfort for a great number of people, especially the senior citizens and the poor."

Rizzo and Gov. Milton J. Shapp had taken a hard line against offering any more money after the workers rejected a tentative agreement in March that called for a 60 cents an hour increase over two years.

The new pact essentially redistributes the same 60 cents an hour increase. It provides for an hourly wage increase of 32 cents, retroactive to last March 15, 5 cents more the day the strikers return to work and 23 cents on March 15, 1978. SEPTA employes earned an average of $6.43 an hour.

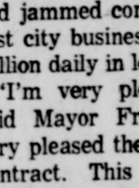

It was not clear from where the money would come to pay for the new contract but an increase in the 35-cent base fare loomed as a certainty.

"Now, this is what I would call 'hard sell'!"

Save on utility bill, use a little advice

If you remember to check the lumens on your light bulbs, the R-value of your insulation and the EER of your air conditioner, you're likely to save money on your utility bill.

Booklets on energy conservation are proliferating faster than rabbits and some of the ideas seem impractical. For example, one book put out by Energy Conservation Research suggests you keep a map of the contents of your refrigerator to cut down on the time the refrigerator door is open.

But many of the suggestions cost nothing more than a little thought. Others require only minor investments that will be more than paid for by savings on utility bills.

START WITH AN electric attic fan, used to draw the outside air in through windows and doors and exhaust it through the attic. This ventilating system, tested on a Houston home, saved about $265 a year compared to a home using air conditioning.

An attic fan uses only about 500 watts or 10 per cent of the power required to air condition an entire house. Even a window fan, which uses about 150 watts, reduces the need for air conditioning, making warmer temperatures more tolerable.

When shopping for air conditioners, check the energy efficiency rating (EER) to find which units provide the most cooling for the least power. Ratings range from 4.7 to 12.2, but units with ER's of 8 or 9 are considered good.

Refrigerator-freezers are the only other appliances now rated for energy efficiency with statistics available on the number of kilowatts used per month. Frost-free models use 36 per cent more energy than standard models and water and ice dispensers also add to energy consumption.

Typical Annual Energy Costs for a Family of Four

Private Auto	$600-$1200
Home Heating	300- 500
Home Air Conditioning	300- 500
Hot Water	120
Refrigeration	80
Cooking	80
Lighting	20
Color TV (4 hr. per day)	20
Coffeemaker (twice per day)	8
Window Fan (800 hr. per yr.)	8
Iron (12 hr. per month)	7
Radio (4 hr. per day)	6
Vacuum Cleaner (2 hr. per wk.)	3
Hair Dryer — 1000 watts	3
Toaster	2
Clock	1
Mixer	.10
Shaver	.03
Can Opener	.02
Knife Sharpener	.01

Energy standards soon will be available for other appliances, according to Frank Miles of the Assn. of Home Appliance Manufacturers. A law passed in late 1975 set up mandatory efficiency ratings, but guidelines have not been issued.

THE HOT WATER heater is the second largest consumer of energy in the home. Many people overheat their water in tanks larger than needed. An average family of four can use a 40 gallon oil or gas fueled water heater, while an 80 gallon tank is recommended for an electrical system.

Temperatures need to be only 140 degrees for a normal house with a dishwasher. If the water heater is used only in the bathroom, temperatures can be set at 110 degrees.

Showers use less hot water than baths and use of cold water in washing machines can lower utility bills 4 per cent. Hot water pipes should be insulated and dishwashers should only be used when full.

When cooking, use small portable electrical appliances when possible. These use less power, because they heat less space. Microwave ovens are efficient cooking devices, as are toaster ovens, electric frying pans and slow cookers.

Self-cleaning ovens consume a lot of energy. Electric self-cleaning ovens uses about six kilowatt-hours per cleaning, while gas ovens use about one-half therm per cleaning.

KITCHEN RANGES with pilot lights also are wasteful, accounting for 1/3 to 1/2 of total gas use. New, more modern ranges feature electric ignitions which eliminate this loss.

All appliances should be cleaned and maintained well to operate at peak energy efficiency. Frost in the freezer, lint in the clothes dryer and a dirty furnace also waste energy.

When choosing lightbulbs, remember that larger wattage bulbs usually are more efficient than smaller bulbs. Likewise, fluorescent lighting is more economical than incandescent lighting.

Despite the new energy awareness, Commonwealth Edison says it will be a record-setting summer, with a single day's energy consumption going as high as 13 million kilowatts.

"A lot of people are really being conscientious about trying to save energy, to control the size of their bill, if no other reason," said Bill Harrah, Commonwealth Edison spokesman. "But after two or three good hot humid days this summer, people are going to say 'I deserve a break,' hit the air conditioner and bang, there goes a new record."

Zaire puts archers in battlefield

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Archers armed with deadly poisoned arrows are once more fighting rebel invaders in southern Zaire and are spreading panic among the enemy, the official radio said Sunday.

The announcement followed reports the insurgents were also using bows and arrows and came three weeks after supposed devastating attacks on their positions by Pygmy bowmen.

The radio said "a large contingent of men armed with poisoned arrows" had joined government troops in Shaba province, invaded March 8 from Angola by former secessionist gendarmes.

It said they were "sowing panic among the enemy."

Government sources said the rebels — now reportedly in full retreat — were also sending archers into battle. A prisoner who was said to be an enemy scout armed with bows and arrows when he was captured was put on display in Kinshasa Saturday.

Last month, President Sese Seko Mobutu claimed he had sent a contingent of Pygmy archers to the province and they too were said to be striking fear in enemy ranks. But reporters who arrived in the area two weeks ago never saw the bark-skirted warriors and were told they had been withdrawn for "retraining."

Officials said the four-foot-tall Pygmies, native to the Ituri forest in northeastern Zaire, had experienced difficulties fighting in eight-foot-tall elephant grass.

Sunday's announcement did not describe the new force of bowmen as Pygmies but said they were part of the secret counterguerrilla weapons promised by Mobutu, who is in Shaba supervising an offensive by a combined Zaire-Moroccan force.

Patients plagued by good intentions

by ELEANOR RIVES

So your mother's in the hospital getting rid of that pesky gall bladder. Well, do her a favor. Don't take the kiddies up to visit her.

Your uncle had a heart attack? He's out of coronary care and in a regular hospital room now. Gave up smoking completely and it's beginning to get to him. Helps a little that they put him in a room with a non-smoker. Give him a break. Don't smoke while you're there. Don't even smell of smoke.

You're part of a large family and the head of the clan was injured in an automobile accident. He needs rest and quiet and the knowledge that the whole family is concerned about him. But not all at once and in person.

PISH TOSH, you say, you wouldn't do any of those things. Maybe not you. But a great many well-intentioned, even considerate, people do. Hospital rules are broken all the time. Children are smuggled up to patients' rooms or left to run around unattended in the hall. Visitors smoke, make too much noise, sit on the bed, visit in record numbers and almost have to be pushed out the door after visiting hours are over. Well-meaning relatives or friends bring in off-diet food and drink.

"We don't want to discourage visitors," said Sister M. Amata, president of Holy Family Hospital. "Visitors can be very therapeutic and helpful to a patient if their numbers and hours are regulated. One or two family members sitting quietly at the bedside is good medicine for the patient."

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital, patients are asked to fill out a questionnaire anonymously before being released. Significantly, some of the patients themselves suggested that hospital regulations be more strictly enforced.

"In coronary, it was fine. When they moved me to the third floor, my roommate had seven visitors at one time. It was too hard on me."

"There were too many visitors visiting one patient in my room. Six persons came in on four or five occasions. It was very disturbing."

"There needs to be firmer control of visitors. Some people had as many as six visitors at the same time. They were rude when nursing personnel asked them to leave."

BUT ENFORCING regulations, even though they have become more and more lenient in recent years, takes nursing time away from the nurses and security time away from the security guards, whose major duties are to prevent vandalism in the parking lot and to help in the emergency area.

Lutheran General Hospital has come up with a tentative solution — the Visitor Hospitality program. Twenty members of the Service League, the hospital's auxiliary, have volunteered to become "patient representatives." Emphasis is on welcoming the visitor as an important member of the health care team. He, like the patient, is a guest in the house. He is made to feel that his visits can play a key role in speeding a patient's recovery.

"Our approach is that if visitors are oriented on how to use the hospital, unpleasant situations will not occur," said Sandy Main, director of volunteer services.

VISITORS ARE given an information card, "Welcome to our Team," that not only includes visiting hours and rules but also tells where they may eat, park, speak to a chaplain, purchase a gift or just a stamp and make a telephone call.

A patient representative might slip in and out of hospital rooms during peak visiting hours, chatting with visitors, fetching an extra chair, offering a cup of coffee or a vase for flowers. Occasionally, if necessary and only in a pleasant manner, she might remind visitors of hospital policies.

Too many visitors at one time? "Would a few of you like to have coffee in the lounge?" she asks. Smoking in the patient's room? She directs the visitor to a lounge area. Young children in the room? "I'm sorry, but children under 12 may not go beyond the main lobby."

THE VISITOR Hospitality program is a pilot one, an experiment begun in mid-March in two large units of the hospital, the orthopedic unit and general medical-surgical floor. Because of its success, it has been expanded to two more medical-surgical units where visiting is permitted from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Perhaps National Hospital Week, May 8-14, is as good a time as any to review your own hospital visiting habits. Are they considerate? Are they courteous? Do they help the patient get better . . . or worse?

As Sister Amata pointed out, "The welfare of the patient is the paramount consideration for all of us."

AS A MEDICAL transcriber at Northwest Community Hospital, Lois Pickens must exercise a good deal of concentration. There is a shortage of trained transcribers to meet the demand.

Transcribers perform vital role in medicine

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Needed: Medical transcriptionists.

Hours: Flexible, can be scheduled as desired around the clock.

Salary: $4 to $6 an hour.

Medical transcriptionists are specialists who transcribe reports dictated by physicians and then type that information on automated machines. They are in short supply, and jobs are plentiful.

"This is a career area of critical need!" said Jean Johnson, director of medical records at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village. "Nothing makes me more uptight than to have a supervisor tell me someone is leaving. Transcribers are needed in hospitals, laboratories, clinics and in doctor's offices," she said.

Medical records directors at four Northwest suburban hospitals agree that because of the large demand, there's always a shortage of such specialists.

Although good typing skills are essential, medical transcription is not just a typing job. Good grammar and extensive knowledge of medical terms also are required.

"BECAUSE SUBJECT content is about people, the job is very interesting. If the transcriptionist understands what the doctor is dictating, she never stops learning," Mrs. Johnson said.

The transcriptionist learns all about a patient's health — and more — as she types confidential information including histories, physicals, consultation and operative reports and discharge summaries. And she learns about new diagnostic procedures, specialties and treatments as she records data on laboratory and psychological testing, drug therapy and other treatments.

"These women are flexible, versatile. They give valuable, essential services to medicine," said Mrs. Johnson.

Medical transcription is challenging. It is demanding.

Walk into the work area of the transcriber. The women look up and smile, but continue typing, concentrating on those voices coming from their earphones.

The transcriber must be able to grasp the doctor's dictation whether he whispers, slurs his words, speaks too rapidly or with an accent. And as an additional pressure, she often must type information that is needed immediately.

Although the transcriptionist often works under pressure, she has excellent help: her equipment.

AT ALEXIAN BROTHERS, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge and Holy Family in Des Plaines, transcribers use IBM MAG-CARD equipment. Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights recently installed a Video Text Processor that includes a video screen stationed at eye level above the keyboard. Both operator and supervisor can see at a glance what is being transcribed or corrected.

The transcriber perfects the data showing on the video screen first, then pushes the print-button, and completed information is recorded on magnetic tape and typed out on the playout machine, explained Dimetrola (Demi) Mourafetis, chief medical records librarian at Northwest.

"Because it takes pressure off the transcriptionist, the new machines have increased our output 75 per cent," she said.

In addition to be able to operate such machinery well, a good transcriber must be above average in intelligence, extremely self-disciplined and possess greater than average powers of concentration, according to Rosemary Van Vranken, director of medical records at Holy Family.

"It is not an easy position. A good transcriptionist needs extensive background in medical terminology, especially in anatomy and physiology," she said.

IT'S POSSIBLE to develop these skills on the job, but medical records directors prefer to hire those specially trained. Both Harper and Oakton Community Colleges offer nine-month study courses to prepare high school office skills graduates for medical transcribing. Most medical records directors at local hospitals would like to see these programs expanded.

Learning in the classroom to transcribe from dictation spoken in clear, concise and perfectly enunciated English, for example, is not the same as working in the field, noted Mrs. Van Vranken.

She has provided Oakton classes with tapes made by physicians at Holy Family. The practical experience of learning from physicians at work really has helped, she said.

"When students can concentrate on doctors' voices as they actually dictate, they aren't so overwhelmed when they get into the field," she said.

The shortage of medical transcriptionists has hospitals very concerned and Jean Johnson at Alexian Brothers wants to do something about it.

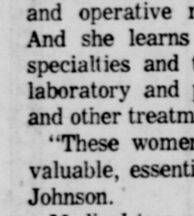

She is available to talk about medical transcribing as a career. "For high school graduates who do not want to go four years to college, a nine month course of study prepares them for a career. Important work, medical transcribing is a good career," she says.

Those interested in contacting Jean may reach her at 437-5500, ex. 730.

A machine for Mom? Choose it carefully

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple

Dear Readers: With Mother's Day just around the corner, it seems timely to write about sewing machines — the No. 1 gift for Mom.

To all good husbands: Unless you know exactly what model of machine your gal would love, don't surprise her with one you got a special deal on. There is never a deal on quality.

Also, the sewing machine your mother or grandmother swore by is not necessarily the one your wife would love. Rather than surprise her with a machine she might not really like, why not tell her that she can have the machine of her choice? This will let her have the fun and responsibility of actually making the selection.

Whenever you shop for a sewing machine, be sure to be relaxed and allow plenty of time. A sewing machine is expensive, so be sure and select one that will do everything you want it to. Don't let anyone pressure you into a purchase you aren't sure about.

Some shops will let you borrow a sewing machine for a few days so you may try it at home. If this is not possible, try it in the store, and make sure you actually try the machine yourself — don't just watch the salesperson.

The warranty of the machine is one of the most important things to consider when making a purchase. Check it carefully to see exactly what it covers.

While shopping, check the features of the machine. Are the stitches even on both sides of the fabric? Is there a speed control for slow as well as fast stitching? Is the machine relatively quiet and free of vibrations? Are the buttonholes easy to make and are they perfect?

Be sure to check the details on tension adjustment. One Swiss-made machine has perfected the tension so it never needs adjusting, regardless of fabric. Find out if the machine is easy to thread and if it is easy to clean and oil.

Also, when you purchase a machine, be sure you receive personal lessons on how to use it. As I said earlier, a sewing machine is expensive — but with the proper care and a happy, knowledgeable sewer, it will last for years.

This week's winner of the gold blazer buttons is Mrs. W. D. Wilkinson, 808 S. Brentwood, Apt. 3B, Clayton, Mo., 63195. Her tip:

"For an easy way to put a zipper in pants or skirts, use a 9-inch nylon or Teflon zipper instead of the usual 7-inch type.

"Apply the zipper in the usual way, but leave the two extra inches extending at the top.

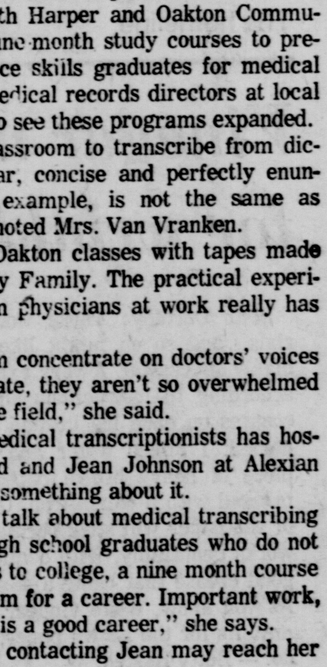

"Un-zip the zipper and apply the waistband, sewing right across the zipper. Cut off the excess above the seam.

"This will give you a smooth application with no uneven stitching when jobbing around the zipper tab.

Your uncle had a heart attack? He's out of coronary care and in a regular hospital room now. Gave up smoking completely and it's beginning to get to him. Helps a little that they put him in a room with a non-smoker. Give him a break. Don't smoke while you're there. Don't even smell of smoke.

You're part of a large family and the head of the clan was injured in an automobile accident. He needs rest and quiet and the knowledge that the whole family is concerned about him. But not all at once and in person.

PISH TOSH, you say, you wouldn't do any of those things. Maybe not you. But a great many well-intentioned, even considerate, people do. Hospital rules are broken all the time. Children are smuggled up to patients' rooms or left to run around unattended in the hall. Visitors smoke, make too much noise, sit on the bed, visit in record numbers and almost have to be pushed out the door after visiting hours are over. Well-meaning relatives or friends bring in off-diet food and drink.

"We don't want to discourage visitors," said Sister M. Amata, president of Holy Family Hospital. "Visitors can be very therapeutic and helpful to a patient if their numbers and hours are regulated. One or two family members sitting quietly at the bedside is good medicine for the patient."

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital, patients are asked to fill out a questionnaire anonymously before being released. Significantly, some of the patients themselves suggested that hospital regulations be more strictly enforced.

"In coronary, it was fine. When they moved me to the third floor, my roommate had seven visitors at one time. It was too hard on me."

"There were too many visitors visiting one patient in my room. Six persons came in on four or five occasions. It was very disturbing."

"There needs to be firmer control of visitors. Some people had as many as six visitors at the same time. They were rude when nursing personnel asked them to leave."

BUT ENFORCING regulations, even though they have become more and more lenient in recent years, takes nursing time away from the nurses and security time away from the security guards, whose major duties are to prevent vandalism in the parking lot and to help in the emergency area.

Lutheran General Hospital has come up with a tentative solution — the Visitor Hospitality program. Twenty members of the Service League, the hospital's auxiliary, have volunteered to become "patient representatives." Emphasis is on welcoming the visitor as an important member of the health care team. He, like the patient, is a guest in the house. He is made to feel that his visits can play a key role in speeding a patient's recovery.

"Our approach is that if visitors are oriented on how to use the hospital, unpleasant situations will not occur," said Sandy Main, director of volunteer services.

VISITORS ARE given an information card, "Welcome to our Team," that not only includes visiting hours and rules but also tells where they may eat, park, speak to a chaplain, purchase a gift or just a stamp and make a telephone call.

A patient representative might slip in and out of hospital rooms during peak visiting hours, chatting with visitors, fetching an extra chair, offering a cup of coffee or a vase for flowers. Occasionally, if necessary and only in a pleasant manner, she might remind visitors of hospital policies.

Too many visitors at one time? "Would a few of you like to have coffee in the lounge?" she asks. Smoking in the patient's room? She directs the visitor to a lounge area. Young children in the room? "I'm sorry, but children under 12 may not go beyond the main lobby."

THE VISITOR Hospitality program is a pilot one, an experiment begun in mid-March in two large units of the hospital, the orthopedic unit and general medical-surgical floor. Because of its success, it has been expanded to two more medical-surgical units where visiting is permitted from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Perhaps National Hospital Week, May 8-14, is as good a time as any to review your own hospital visiting habits. Are they considerate? Are they courteous? Do they help the patient get better . . . or worse?

As Sister Amata pointed out, "The welfare of the patient is the paramount consideration for all of us."

AS A MEDICAL transcriber at Northwest Community Hospital, Lois Pickens must exercise a good deal of concentration. There is a shortage of trained transcribers to meet the demand.

Transcribers perform vital role in medicine

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Needed: Medical transcriptionists.

Hours: Flexible, can be scheduled as desired around the clock.

Salary: $4 to $6 an hour.

Medical transcriptionists are specialists who transcribe reports dictated by physicians and then type that information on automated machines. They are in short supply, and jobs are plentiful.

"This is a career area of critical need!" said Jean Johnson, director of medical records at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village. "Nothing makes me more uptight than to have a supervisor tell me someone is leaving. Transcribers are needed in hospitals, laboratories, clinics and in doctor's offices," she said.

Medical records directors at four Northwest suburban hospitals agree that because of the large demand, there's always a shortage of such specialists.

Although good typing skills are essential, medical transcription is not just a typing job. Good grammar and extensive knowledge of medical terms also are required.

"BECAUSE SUBJECT content is about people, the job is very interesting. If the transcriptionist understands what the doctor is dictating, she never stops learning," Mrs. Johnson said.

The transcriptionist learns all about a patient's health — and more — as she types confidential information including histories, physicals, consultation and operative reports and discharge summaries. And she learns about new diagnostic procedures, specialties and treatments as she records data on laboratory and psychological testing, drug therapy and other treatments.

"These women are flexible, versatile. They give valuable, essential services to medicine," said Mrs. Johnson.

Medical transcription is challenging. It is demanding.

Walk into the work area of the transcriber. The women look up and smile, but continue typing, concentrating on those voices coming from their earphones.

The transcriber must be able to grasp the doctor's dictation whether he whispers, slurs his words, speaks too rapidly or with an accent. And as an additional pressure, she often must type information that is needed immediately.

Although the transcriptionist often works under pressure, she has excellent help: her equipment.

AT ALEXIAN BROTHERS, Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge and Holy Family in Des Plaines, transcribers use IBM MAG-CARD equipment. Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights recently installed a Video Text Processor that includes a video screen stationed at eye level above the keyboard. Both operator and supervisor can see at a glance what is being transcribed or corrected.

The transcriber perfects the data showing on the video screen first, then pushes the print-button, and completed information is recorded on magnetic tape and typed out on the playout machine, explained Dimetrola (Demi) Mourafetis, chief medical records librarian at Northwest.

"Because it takes pressure off the transcriptionist, the new machines have increased our output 75 per cent," she said.

In addition to be able to operate such machinery well, a good transcriber must be above average in intelligence, extremely self-disciplined and possess greater than average powers of concentration, according to Rosemary Van Vranken, director of medical records at Holy Family.

"It is not an easy position. A good transcriptionist needs extensive background in medical terminology, especially in anatomy and physiology," she said.

IT'S POSSIBLE to develop these skills on the job, but medical records directors prefer to hire those specially trained. Both Harper and Oakton Community Colleges offer nine-month study courses to prepare high school office skills graduates for medical transcribing. Most medical records directors at local hospitals would like to see these programs expanded.

Learning in the classroom to transcribe from dictation spoken in clear, concise and perfectly enunciated English, for example, is not the same as working in the field, noted Mrs. Van Vranken.

She has provided Oakton classes with tapes made by physicians at Holy Family. The practical experience of learning from physicians at work really has helped, she said.

"When students can concentrate on doctors' voices as they actually dictate, they aren't so overwhelmed when they get into the field," she said.

The shortage of medical transcriptionists has hospitals very concerned and Jean Johnson at Alexian Brothers wants to do something about it.

She is available to talk about medical transcribing as a career. "For high school graduates who do not want to go four years to college, a nine month course of study prepares them for a career. Important work, medical transcribing is a good career," she says.

Those interested in contacting Jean may reach her at 437-5500, ex. 730.

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple

Dear Readers: With Mother's Day just around the corner, it seems timely to write about sewing machines — the No. 1 gift for Mom.

To all good husbands: Unless you know exactly what model of machine your gal would love, don't surprise her with one you got a special deal on. There is never a deal on quality.

Also, the sewing machine your mother or grandmother swore by is not necessarily the one your wife would love. Rather than surprise her with a machine she might not really like, why not tell her that she can have the machine of her choice? This will let her have the fun and responsibility of actually making the selection.

Whenever you shop for a sewing machine, be sure to be relaxed and allow plenty of time. A sewing machine is expensive, so be sure and select one that will do everything you want it to. Don't let anyone pressure you into a purchase you aren't sure about.

Some shops will let you borrow a sewing machine for a few days so you may try it at home. If this is not possible, try it in the store, and make sure you actually try the machine yourself — don't just watch the salesperson.

The warranty of the machine is one of the most important things to consider when making a purchase. Check it carefully to see exactly what it covers.

While shopping, check the features of the machine. Are the stitches even on both sides of the fabric? Is there a speed control for slow as well as fast stitching? Is the machine relatively quiet and free of vibrations? Are the buttonholes easy to make and are they perfect?

Be sure to check the details on tension adjustment. One Swiss-made machine has perfected the tension so it never needs adjusting, regardless of fabric. Find out if the machine is easy to thread and if it is easy to clean and oil.

Also, when you purchase a machine, be sure you receive personal lessons on how to use it. As I said earlier, a sewing machine is expensive — but with the proper care and a happy, knowledgeable sewer, it will last for years.

This week's winner of the gold blazer buttons is Mrs. W. D. Wilkinson, 808 S. Brentwood, Apt. 3B, Clayton, Mo., 63195. Her tip:

"For an easy way to put a zipper in pants or skirts, use a 9-inch nylon or Teflon zipper instead of the usual 7-inch type.

"Apply the zipper in the usual way, but leave the two extra inches extending at the top.

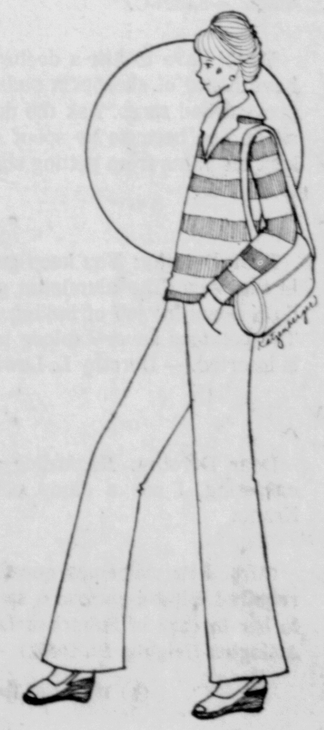

"Un-zip the zipper and apply the waistband, sewing right across the zipper. Cut off the excess above the seam.

"This will give you a smooth application with no uneven stitching when jobbing around the zipper tab.

The doctor says

Potassium crucial to body functions

Of late I have been hearing about potassium. Different people are getting tests for potassium in their systems so it comes from more than one doctor's orders. My dictionary lists 10 different kinds of potassium but not one pertaining to the body. One person is extremely tired and potassium is a help. Another has had headaches and takes potassium by eating bananas. What do we need potassium for: Where do we find it in our foods? How much do we need? Is too much dangerous? Is this a new theory?

There is only one kind of potassium. It is one of the basic chemical elements, as are sodium, oxygen, hydrogen, iron and others. You have probably looked at a list of potassium salts. When an element such as sodium combines with another element such as chlorine, it forms a salt — in this case sodium chloride, ordinary table salt. Potassium belongs to the same family of elements as sodium and it unites with chlorine to form potassium chloride — also a salt. It may also combine with other elements to form other potassium salts.

Whereas sodium chloride is abundant outside the cells in body fluids, potassium salts are abundant inside the cells. the potassium phosphate salts are a vital part of the basic metabolic machinery inside your cells. Your cells cannot function properly without adequate amounts of potassium salts. Decreased amounts of potassium can lead to weakness. It is important inside the cells making up the muscle fibers of the heart. A low level may lead to irregularities of the heart.

Too much potassium affects the cells that control the heartbeat. This may cause the heart to slow and even stop. Surgeons use potassium to stop the heart when doing open heart surgery.

Your kidneys normally eliminate any excess potassium your body does not need. That is why you can eat foods rich in potassium and never worry about it. If the kidneys are diseased and unable to eliminate potassium, it can build up in the body and become dangerous.

NO, POTASSIUM is not a new theory. We have known about it and its essential role in normal body function for a long time. But we have learned a lot more about it in recent years.

Your best food sources for potassium are fruits and fruit juices. That is why the one person you mentioned was advised to eat bananas. Orange juice is an excellent source, but all the fruits and fruit juices are good for potassium. A diet rich in fruits and fruit juices will provide an abundance of potassium without danger to the individual.

We see a lot more cases now of people having a low potassium level because of new medicines. Most of the medicine used to eliminate body water — the so-called water pills — will cause the kidneys to flush out sodium and also potassium. These medicines are commonly used for people who have high blood pressure, heart disease or fruid retention for any reason. As a resutt, the more "water pills" prescribed the greater is the need to emphasize the importance of a diet that provides an adequate amount of potassium.

For information on a balanced diet and the amounts of vitamins and minerals you need, send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA). Vinegar method works for wrinkled pants

Dear Dorothy: Those worrying about wrinkles in pants,materials and so on might like to try my method, which has been highly successful. A very expensive pantsuit was washed and dried according to instructions and yet the pants came out with four creases on each leg instead of two. No amount of steam pressing helped. I mixed water and white vinegar and sprinkled it on a piece of heavy brown paper placed over the extra creases and pressed with a steam iron. One has to be sure the iron isn't too hot or the paper will stick permanently to the fabric. Done properly, it works beautifully. With continuous use, the vinegar method gives a good crease that using a steam iron by itself does not accomplish. As you know, white vinegar does not leave a shine — it removes any. As for the brown paper, a market bag or wrapping paper will do. — Betty Hasted.

You'll have to ask a doctor. Medical advice is out of my field. I have heard of sheepskin pads being used for bedridden patients to prevent bed sores. Ask the doctor about them. My brother used to sit on one because he spent so much time at his desk. He said it kept his pants from getting shiny.

Baby book shows 'realistic' view

by GAIL GREGG

Even the book jacket of Jean and John Lennanes' new guide to having a baby is different.

It shows a determined-looking, very pregnant woman with a picket sign reading "Hard Labor."

"A Realist's Guide to Having a Baby" is the remainder of the title of the Lennanes' new book on pregnancy and childbirth published recently in London by Victor Gollancz Ltd.

The authors, both doctors in Sydney, Australia, are husband and wife with two children of their own. Their book condemns many current attitudes towards pregnancy so strongly that Penguin, the publisher who originally commissioned the book, refused to accept it.

THE LENNANES and their agents, R. D. Peters, said the deal fell through after Penguin submitted the manuscript to several doctors for professional opinions.

The agents said they are looking for another paperback publisher in Britain, and have been asked by several companies to submit copies for possible American publication.

The authors contend prospective mothers need strong advice.

They write that women who know what to expect from pregnancy, and what help they can obtain for their problems, will overcome their fears and motivate their doctors to examine their ideas more critically.

The Lennanes said most doctors don't recognize the significant physical difficulties involved in pregnancy, labor and new maternity:

"In this enlightened day, a normal, healthy woman is expected to have a trouble-free pregnancy and birth, and rapidly adjust to the new and fulfilling role of motherhood while caring for her contented infant."

The Lennanes call this an idealized stereotype liable to elicit puzzling, unhelpful and often distressing social or medical response.

"You are always going to have a seven-day week . . . What is going to happen when you are ill? . . . Leisure time, like money, is likely to be very short while the children are young . . What if you find, once you have started, that you don't like being a full-time mother?"

THEY WARN that doctors, and sometimes husbands and friends, may be unsympathetic about difficulties during pregnancy.

They quote a standard British medical textbook that describes pregnancy as "the fulfillment of a normal function . . . (that in normal women) . . . "should bring increased vitality and improvement in health." It compares the "strain of pregnancy: with "a brisk walk on a cold day, whilst normal labor is like a climb up hill."

The Lennanes say pregnancy can cause death (current maternal mortality in Britain is one in 8,000 births), severe nausea, hormone-induced depression, skin changes, infections, varicose veins, gum infection, urinary and bladder troubles, hemorrhoids, back pain and faintness, among other things.

They say many doctors tell worried patients that nausea is psychological, despite medical evidence to the contrary.

THEY SAY new natural childbirth methods perpetuate doctors' failure to recognize the obvious pain of women in labor.

The Lennanes theorize that doctors' reluctance to acknowledge the pain stems from a desire to control behavior and the centuries-old notion that women are suggestible, hysterical creatures.

They urge prospective mothers to "make a fuss" until they receive the kind of treatment for pain they need. It's no different, in their view, from asking for pain relief after a tooth extraction.

On a more cheerful note, the Lennanes praise some aspects of pregnancy and maternity care, particularly the involvement of husbands in wives' pregnancies and child care and the slow upgrading of the role of mothers.

The groom's brother, Gary, of Virginia Beach, Va., served as best man, with the bride's brothers, Mark and Scott, as groomsmen. Other groomsmen were Tim Krebs and Bruce Smith, both of Schaumburg.

Following the ceremony, 110 guests enjoyed dinner and dancing at the Nordic Steak 'n Pub in Bensenville.

'Testimony' has makings of a classic

"Testimony of Two Men" has all the makings of a classic celluloid romance set against the backdrop of a nation struggling with growing pains at the turn of the century.

Love, conflict and intrigue are delicately interwoven in this six-hour television novel, which premieres at 8 p.m. today on WGN-TV, Channel 9

One might say this $4 million project from Operation Prime Time, a coalition of 93 independent stations attempting to underwrite top quality prime time programming for themselves, is well "Taylored."

This adaptation of Taylor Caldwell's bestseller is a fine programming effort.

LOVE AND THE development of medical technology are on an equal par in this show set in the victorian era and the champion of both causes is a feisty and handsome Jonathan Ferrier played by David Birney. (Remember him from "Bridget Loves Bernie"?)

The heroine, oddly enough, is his mother, Marjorie Ferrier, portrayed by Barbara Parkins who, in all of her dashing good looks and acting prompts recollections of the "Peyton Place" character she played years ago.

Ms. Parkins also appeared last season in an adaptation of another Caldwell novel, "Captains and the Kings," which was the most popular of NBC's "Best Seller" series.

Mother and son both have their fair share of lovers and troubles, and it is around these two characters that the story of 35 years revolves.

The medical overtones snowball during the first two hours of the television novel. Viewers will be appalled during one scene where a veteran surgeon, conducting a 15-minute amputation, is sawing off his patient's arm with a hack-saw, dirty hands, a cigar hanging from his mouth and a crowd of onlookers beside him.

THE MEDICAL conditions, know-how and attitudes of the time were deplorable.

But, when an upstart such as Jonathan Ferrier decides to crusade for advanced and sterilized medicine, he meets only bitter resistance from powerful foes.

The web of interrelationships among the characters comes into play constantly with the increasing attention given Ferrier's medical campaign.

Jonathan, as a young man, maintains a vigil at his father's side while he slowly and painfully dies from a burst appendix that doctors attempt to treat only with bleeding, leaches and strange applications.

Dr. Martin Eaton, the constant love in Marjorie Ferrier's life who becomes her constant companion oafter her husband's death, is an inspiration as well as godfather to Jonathan.

The two become colleagues in the medical arts, only to experience a painful separation over the revolutionary idea of disinfecting to prevent bacteria-related complications.

THE ACTING is excellent and provides a broad spectrum of character types. Steve Forrest portrays the masculine and debonair Martin Eaton, a familiar face from the recent "S.W.A.T." series.

Linda Purl, seen recently in "The Young Pioneers" and "Little Ladies of the Night," stars as Jonathan Ferrier's promiscuous wife, Mavis. He is accused of her death from an unsterile abortion.

Child star Margaret O'Brien plays the part of Martin Eaton's wife, Flora, and veteran actor Ray Milland stars as merchant Jonas Witherby. "Star Trek" hero William Shatner stars as Marjorie's husband, Adrian Ferrier, and Tom Bosley (of "Happy Days" fame) stars as Dr. Louis Heger who helps Eaton establish a hospital in the small Pennsylvania town where the story takes place.

BARBARA PARKINS AND DAVID BIRNEY IN "TESTIMONY OF TWO MEN"

The sets for the story are magnificent and range from a Civil War battlefield to the grand mansions of an elite class that remains untouched by the pains of the rest of the country.

The antique machines, utensils, furniture and props must have been a real challenge to collect for this epic. There is considerable aging through makeup to be done by most of the major characters and there were some 2,008 costumes sewed or resurrected from old trunks including a blue satin gown first worn by Loretta Young in a 1939 film and a $25,000 1910 wedding gown designed by Worth of Paris.

THIS PIECE has a wonderful feel, like an old Tyrone Power movie, that tells of two generations and the state of medicine at the time. It's kind of a window to the past and wonderfully romantic," said David birney who said he enjoyed playing the arrogant but determinedphysician under fire, Jonathan Ferrier.

"The idea that the hospital back in those days was a source of infection itself is shocking. The health conditions back then were terrible," he said. "The story is a very good way of showing us how deplorable conditions werein the not too distant past."

Independent stations like WGN, who will air the remaining two-hour segments of the novel May 16 and 23 (with repeat broadcasts of installments Wednesdays at 8 p.m. May 11-25) definitely have put big money, big names and a big story into "Testimony of Two Men" in hopes of taking a big step.

The ratings the show receives will determine whether other such cooperative projects will be possible in the future to give independent television stations better quality programming so they can compete against the three networks in prime time. It will give advertisers another way to spend their big commercial dollars and will give viewers more programming alternatives.

"Testimony of Two Men," because it is a quality effort for an important cause, is worthy of the viewing public's support. Besides that, you'll enjoy it.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- You can see Farrah Fawcett-Majors as she looked in 1971 before she was America's latest sex bomb in a comedy pilot she did then for NBC called "Inside O.U.T." at 7 p.m. on Channel 5.
- Clint Eastwood stars in "The Eiger Sanction" as a hit man on a deadly assignment at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

Network schedules avoid violence, seek comedy

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Now that all three networks have announced their program line-ups for the new fall season, let's take a look at what they are really offering the viewing public.

In general terms, America will be seeing less cops and more Westerns and science fiction adventures. Comedy will be king, real life incidents will be the basis for many dramas, and the program schedules that have been so strategically set up will constantly be preempted by specials.

There are reasons for all of these trends. The National Parent-Teacher Assn. and several other major special interest groups have been on their soap boxes long and hard about gratuitous television violence as seen mostly on TV cop shows.

WHETHER THE networks plead guilty or not, it doesn't make for good publicity. So, they have opted to switch rather than to fight. All three networks have terminated a run of meaningless action shows that run the gamut from "Delvecchio" to "The Streets of San Francisco."

You can be sure that all of the basic action-show gems have been retained, however, for next season. You will see, among others, the return of "Kojack," "Starsky and Hutch" and "Police Woman."

As for the rest of the programming trends? Well, "Star Trek" has been undergoing a constant revival and shows like the "Mary Tyler Moore" proved that people just wanted to be able to laugh at themselves more often.

The question that will arise, as the new fall season progresses, is just how long can we laugh and how much of what is labeled comedy turns out to be sheer nonsense?

THERE IS DANGER in meaningless programming whether it's comedy or violence.

What seems bright and yet almost catastrophic about the new season are the specials. Television was never so interrupted during its natural course as it was last season with specials in every conceivable form: novels, mini-series, concerts, news documentaries, films and reports.

Many of the specials we can expect in the fall are melodramas based on real-life events and, in light of the regular programming planned, they may be the closest thing to reality we will see.

ABC will air "Washington" which is based on John Erlichman's Watergate novel "The Company." It's made-for-television movies will include "The Trial of Lee Havey Oswald" and "Young Joe, the Forgotten Kennedy."

NBC's special movies will include "King," "Aspen" and "Karen Ann Quinlan." CBS will present an adaptation of John Dean's Watergate book "Blind Ambition."

The new fall schedule will unfold during the summer months as television writers and viewers are given glimpses of what's to come. Until then, viewers can decide for themselves how the new season looks so far just by looking at what United Press International shows that the three networks have programmed against each other during primetime:

SUNDAY: The adults can watch CBS' "60 Minutes" from 6 to 7 p.m., if they can get the kids away from NBC's "Disney" and ABC's "Hardy Boys-Nancy Drew." CBS and NBC go for sitcoms from 7 to 8 p.m. — "Off The Wall" and "CPO Sharkey" for NBC, "Rhoda" and "On Our Own" for CBS. ABC goes with "Six Million Dollar Man." CBS offers "All In The Family" and "Alice" from 8 to 9 p.m. "Kojak" from 9 to 10 p.m.

MONDAY: It's kidvid time from 7 to 8 p.m., with NBC's standby "Little House on the Prairie" up against CBS' equally old-timey newcomer "Dan'l Boone" and ABC's new "San Pedro Bums." TUESDAY: From 7 to 8 p.m. the shows to beat are ABC's "Happy Days" and "Laverne & Shirley." CBS will try with an hour of blue-collar comedy-drama in "The Fitzpatricks," while NBC goes sci-fi with "Man From Atlantis." CBS has proven winners from 8 to 9 p.m. with "M-A-S-H" and "One Day At A Time," challenged by a pair of sitcoms from ABC, "Three's Company" and the spoof "Soap." NBC offers "Big Hawaii." From 9 to 10 p.m. CBS might have a winner with "The Ed Asner Show" against ABC's popular "Family" and NBC's "Police Woman."

WEDNESDAY: The 7 to 8 p.m. spot is hard to call, with NBC's "Grizzly Adams" against ABC's "Eight Is Enough" and CBS's pair, "Good Times" and "Busting Loose." Lawyers "Rosetti and Ryan" on NBC battle ABC's cop "Baretta" from 9 to 10 p.m.

THURSDAY: NBC starts off with a light-hearted look at the highway patrol in "Chips" from 7 to 8 p.m. while CBS sticks with "The Waltons" and ABC presents "Welcome Back, Kotter" and "What's Happening!" NBC offers something new in comedian Richard Pryor from 8 to 9 p.m., while CBS has "Hawaii 5-0" and ABC presents "Barney Miller" and the new "Carter Country," which should have a new title by fall. Redd Foxx is the newcomer on ABC at 9 p.m. while CBS sticks with "Barnaby Jones" and NBC offers the new "What Really Happened to the Class of '65."

FRIDAY: CBS offers an ABC discard, "Wonder Woman," from 7 to 8, while ABC goes with "Donnie and Marie" and NBC hopes two of its old standbys can get by without their stars — "Sanford Arms" renamed from "Sanford and Son" and without Redd Foxx, and "Chico and the Man." with the same name but without Freddy Prinze as Chico. From 8 to 9 p.m. it's sci-fi with "Logan's Run" on CBS, a movie on ABC and "Rockfore File" on NBC. "Quincy" on NBC and "Switch" on CBS complete the night.

SATURDAY: NBC will try "Bionic Woman" from 7 to 8 p.m. competing with Bob Newhart and "We've Got Each Other" on CBS. and "Fish" and "Operation Petticoat" on ABC. It will be movie time on NBC next, including Hitchcock's "Family Plot" and segments of mini-series. CBS will follow "The Jeffersons" with its ABC castoff, "The Tony Randall Show," while ABC stays with "Starsky and Hutch." The evening ends with Carol Burnett on CBS and "Love Boat," starring Gavin MacLeod, on ABC.

FRIDAY: CBS offers an ABC discard, "Wonder Woman," from 7 to 8, while ABC goes with "Donnie and Marie" and NBC hopes two of its old standbys can get by without their stars — "Sanford Arms" renamed from "Sanford and Son" and without Redd Foxx, and "Chico and the Man." with the same name but without Freddy Prinze as Chico. From 8 to 9 p.m. it's sci-fi with "Logan's Run" on CBS, a movie on ABC and "Rockfore File" on NBC. "Quincy" on NBC and "Switch" on CBS complete the night.

SATURDAY: NBC will try "Bionic Woman" from 7 to 8 p.m. competing with Bob Newhart and "We've Got Each Other" on CBS. and "Fish" and "Operation Petticoat" on ABC. It will be movie time on NBC next, including Hitchcock's "Family Plot" and segments of mini-series. CBS will follow "The Jeffersons" with its ABC cast-off, "The Tony Randall Show," while ABC stays with "Starsky and Hutch." The evening ends with Carol Burnett on CBS and "Love Boat," starring Gavin MacLeod, on ABC.

Cubs hand Atlanta 13th straight defeat

TWO-STRIKE GAMBLE Cubs' hurler Bill Bonham lays down a perfect sacrifice bunt with two strikes on him, advancing runner George Mitterwald to second base in the fourth inning at Wrigley Field Sunday. Mitterwald later scored as part a two-run inning, and the Cubs went on to beat Atlanta 6-3. (Photo by Dom Najolia).

by JEFF NORDLUND

A cold wind from the north swept Wrigley Field Sunday afternoon, dispelling any Cubs' notions of putting away the sagging Atlanta Braves with the long ball.

So, they did the next best thing. They put the Braves away with singles, handing Atlanta a 6-3 setback for the Southerners' 13th straight loss.

More important to the Cubs, the victory completed a three-game sweep of Atlanta. It was also the North Siders' fourth win in a row and their fifth in the now-concluded six-game homestand.

THE CUBS, NOW 13-10 and farther above .500 than they have been all season, open a six-game road trip tonight in Houston. They trail Eastern Division-leading Pittsburgh by 3½ games.

Cubs' batters peppered a trio of Atlanta hurlers for eight singles, two doubles and a triple, indicating at least something — Cubs' bats — were hot in the very cool confines of Wrigley Field.

Starter Bill Bonham lasted seven innings to pick up his third win against two losses, and Bruce Sutter worked the final two stanzas to earn his sixth save.

Even though Chicago's last two opponents, Houston and Atlanta, have been struggling thus far this season, Manager Herman Franks refused to call them patsies.

"DON'T YOU CALL this a soft part of the schedule," he retorted to reporters between chomps on his victory cigar. "We could play a women's softball team, and it wouldn't be a soft part of the schedule."

In the visitors' locker room, the Braves and Manager Dave Bristol were trying to come to grips with a losing skid which has sent their record to 8-19, one of the worst in the major leagues.

"It's a terrible thing," Bristol said of the streak, the longest in the club's history. "I thought we'd win at least one out of 14. Our players are trying hard. They're playing as good as can be expected. Nobody has given up, and team morale is good."

Unfortunately for Atlanta, it will probably take more than morale to make up for the loss of four starters, including Willie Montanez and Gary Matthews, to injury since the season's start.

THE CUBS BUNCHED their six runs in two innings, once again showing a preference for the big inning. A run-producing single by Larry Biittner followed by a two-run triple by Bobby Murcer were key blows in the Cubs' four-run third inning.

An inning later, singles by George Mitterwald, Ivan DeJesus and Biittner accounted for two more runs, driving Braves' starter Max Leon from the mound. He was followed by Bob Johnson and Rick Camp, who combined to contain Chicago for the final four innings.

Bonham, after avoiding any serious trouble through the first six innings, was shelled with four hits and three runs in the seventh. Sutter came on and retired four of the last eight Braves by strike out.

"I thought Bonham had had it in the seventh," Franks said. "I wasn't taking any chances, either. Besides, Sutter had two days' rest. That's like two weeks' rest for him. He was plenty rested."

THREE CUBS' hitter were plunked by Braves' pitches, but none appeared seriously hurt. Steve Ontiveros started the hit parade in the second inning, and Manny Trillo followed in the fifth. Both were hit in the arm.

Jose Cardenal was ticked in the hand after ducking a high and inside pitch in the sixth. He was taken out an inning later and replaced by Greg Gross.

White Sox, Stone sweep Indians, 8-3

AL baseball

From Herald Wire Services

CLEVELAND — The White Sox finally got some runs for Steve Stone.

Stone, the tough luck candidate of the Sox pitching staff, owns the best earned run average of Sox starters, 1.98, and has four complete games pitched in six starts this year. But the paltry support supplied by his teammates up until Sunday had given him only one win in four decisions.

However the Sox made up for lost time Sunday as they pounded out an 8-3 win for a series sweep over the Indians as Stone picked up his second win of the season and fourth distance showing.

CHET LEMON led the hit parade with a 5-for-5 performance, and Oscar Gamble, hitting at a .545 clip in his last nine games, belted a two-run homer. The win kept the ChiSox within one game of first place behind Minnesota in the American League West.

The Sox, who have been averaging almost six runs per game in breezing to five victories in seven games on their current 10-game road trip, took a 1-0 lead on Lemon's run-scoring single in the second inning and Gamble drilled his fourth homer into the right field stands following a two-out walk to Jim Spencer in the third.

A two-run, run-scoring single by Eric Soderholm chased Cleveland starter and loser Al Fitzmorris (2-3) in a two-run fifth. Ralph Garr reached third on center fielder Rick Manning's error in the sixth and scored on Alan Bannister's single while Jim Essian and Garr singled home the final two Chicago runs in the ninth.

Stone, who grew up on the Cleveland sandlots, gave up a solo homer to Andre Thornton in the third, a run-scoring single to Manning in the fifth and the Indians scored once in the ninth on Jim Norris' sacrifice fly.

ELSEWHERE in the American League, Texas beat Kansas City 5-2, New York trounced Oakland 10-5, Boston edged California 4-3, Milwaukee downed Detroit 7-4, Minnesota held off Toronto 5-4, and Baltimore sunk Seattle, 6-4.

Pat Kelly blasted a first-inning grand slam homer Sunday — his fifth home run in the last six games — to lead Jim Palmer and the Orioles over Seattle..

District baseball takes toll

Buffalo Grove, Arlington, Elk Grove, Prospect, Hoffman Estates and Fremd all advanced through district baseball competition Saturday at four different sites.

Errors proved costly at Wheeling Saturday, however, where the Wildcats dropped a 5-2 verdict to Lake Forest and failed to make the district finals for the first time in nine years.

Dick Turelli stroked a pair of timely doubles and Mark Kerr pitched two-hit ball and struck out 10 for the Scouts. Meanwhile all five Lake Forest runs off losing pitcher Jim Passolt were unearned.

A city is born . . . in the Derby infield

Jim Cook

Assistant sports editor

LOUISVILLE—Seattle Slew took two minutes to dispel any rumors that he was unfit to run a route. And he silenced the skeptics who charged him with fraud in evaluating the competition he has faced with an impressive 1¾ length Kentucky Derby triumph Saturday.

But while The Slew captivated and conquered the faith of 124,038 — the fourth largest crowd to personally attend a Derby — it was the infield cult that kept the seat-buying customers entertained all day.

Patrons with reserved seats paid dearly for the privilege. Grandstand seats in the boonies for Friday and Saturday's races started at $210 for a box of six and climbed steadily to a top-dollar $2,400 in the premier areas.

A PERSON AT Churchill Downs' front gate Derby Day morning was being escorted to the pokey for scalping $800 tickets for $1,000. Although he picked the wrong buyer, the odds were he could have easily received his price.

Infield inhabitants had no such problem. Circumscribed by the one-mile dirt track, the infield is immense. Until, of course, you pump 80,000 highly-active teenagers into it. The great expanse very quickly becomes extremely intimate.

The Churchill Downs gates ruptured under the pressure of nearly 10,000 kids who sprinted into the green landscape at 8 a.m., a full 9½ hours before Seattle Slew appeared on the track.

The infield crowd was well-behaved for their size (80,000), the heat (84 degrees) and the availability of alcohol (beer and mint juleps were flowing at about a two-mile-per-hour current from the concession stands and concealed flasks).

"ARE YOU arresting pot smokers?" I asked one of Churchill Downs' 11,000 employes — a billy-club toter from nearby Fort Knox' military police.

"Only if I see 'em," he said, slapping his hand with the wooden persuader.

"Aren't you suspicious of those guys passing the cigaret around right over there?" I pointed.

"Where?" he asked, deliberately looking in the other direction.

THE MP'S attitude might have explained the biggest attraction and advantages of the Downs' infield on Derby Day. The freedom to come and go as you please, do virtually what you want. The bonus is the eighth race.

One-half of Churchill Downs Village is guaranteed to miss the actual running of the Run for the Roses because of the poor visibility created by fans standing 25 deep along the restraining chain-link fence. Four infielders lugged ladders which became extremely valuable later in the day.

That's why it's imperative to arrive early, pay the $10 infield admission fee and stake out a vantage point.

The prime areas — the finish line, stretch and top of the turn for home — are the most-valuable real estate plots. Tents are pitched and blankets spread after the land claims.

TWO UNDERGROUND tunnels permit the infield crowd to enter and leave without disrupting the track surface which would have been irreparably damaged by the stampede.

By 10 a.m., there was a solid ring around the track with the fence becoming a convenient hanger for shirts. Frisbees filled the air, poker games (using chips for money) were being dealt and a net was erected for a volleyball game.

Some read the Racing Form or a book, while others sacked out after driving or partying all night. Picnic baskets were already being attacked at 8:30 and a trio of guitar pickers was generating support in the center of the ellipse.

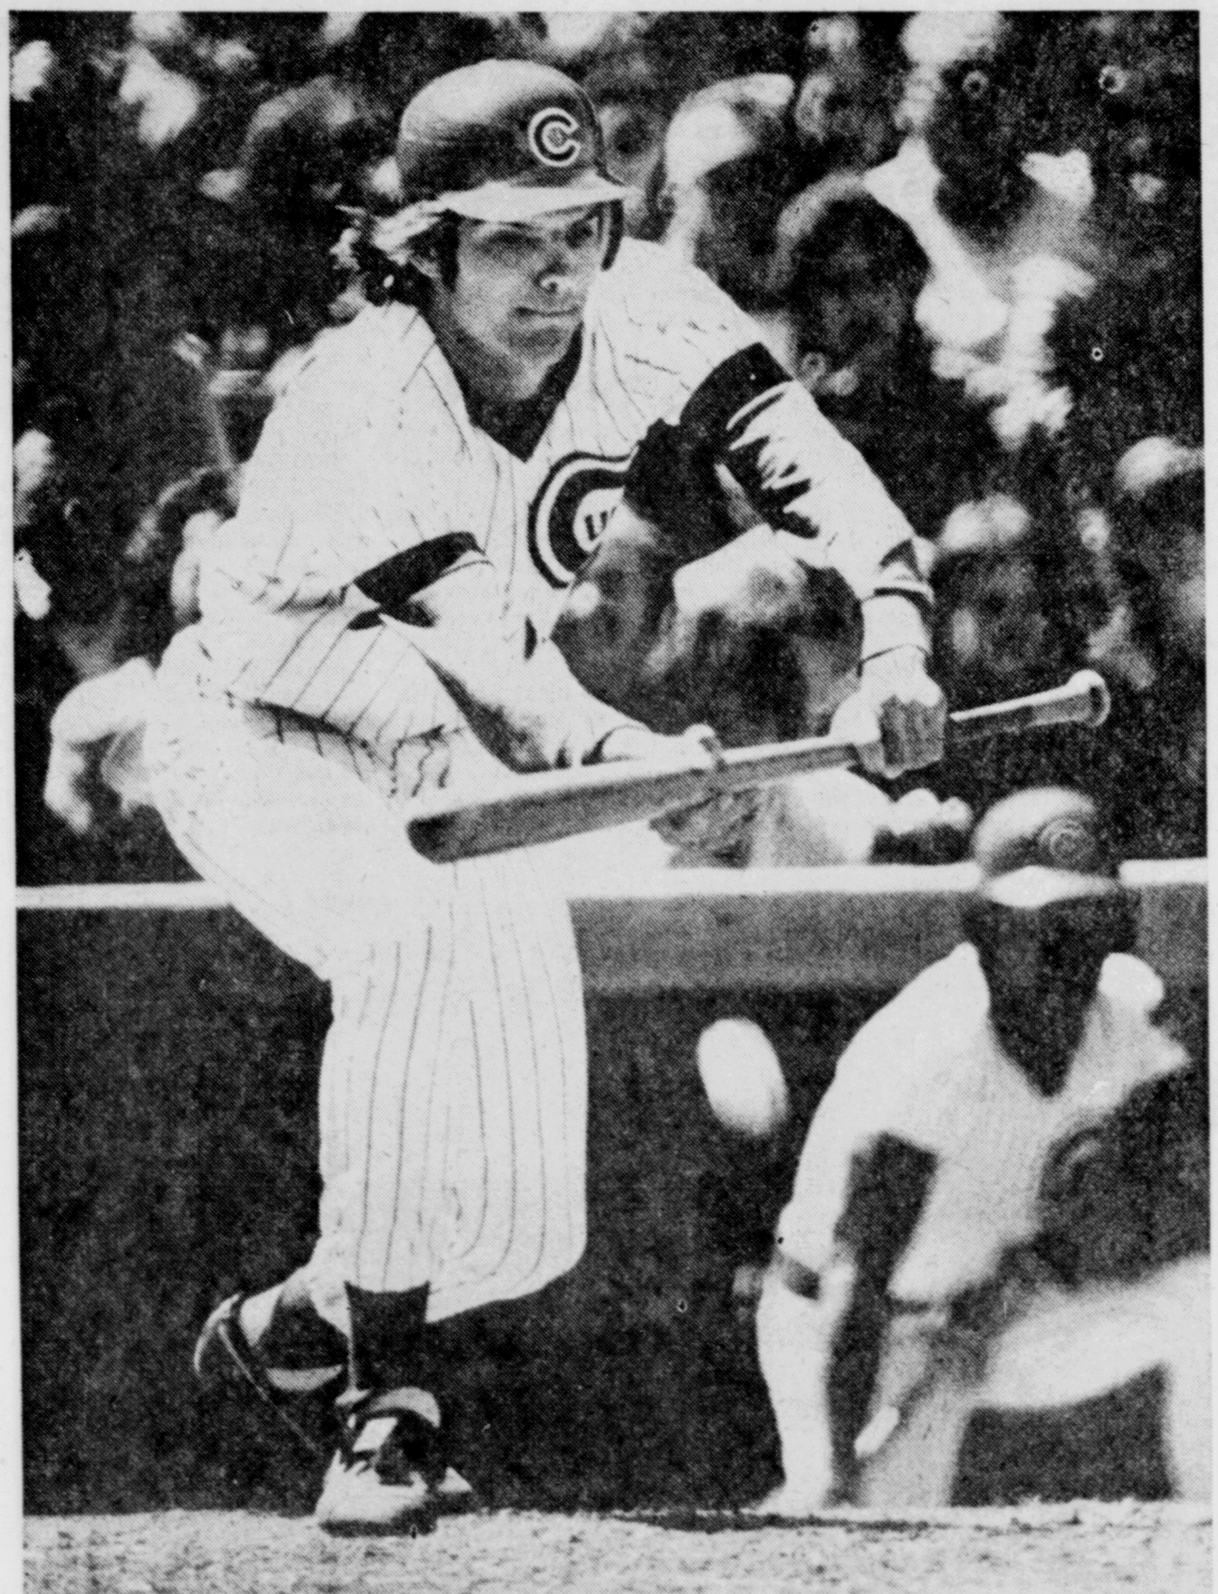

CHEERS WOULD erupt at regular intervals signifying the winner of a beer or julep-chugging contest. Beer in the infield sold for $1 per cup while the mint juleps cost $2.50, which included the souvenir glass.

The start of the races did little to change the infield routine. Hibachi sets were smouldering and wisely avoided by the Frisbee throwing and catching brigade. At least one 10-15 member human pyramid was built during the 40 minutes between races. A kite was even several hundred feet in th air by post time.

The two-minute Kentucky Derby came and went. The volleyball game never broke service, the guitar pickers never stopped strumming and the cards never stopped shuffling.

But that's life in the infield on Derby Day.

A 'hot' day for Saxons' sprinters

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

Saturday wasn't a perfect day for sprinters, but Schaumburg's explosive corps of speed merchants tuned up the afterburners for next week's Mid-Suburban finals with a near-sweep of the sprint events at the Hoffman Relays.

Strong crosswinds and temperatures in the mid-50s made it all the harder, but Steve Knudson, Jeff Ways and Pat Youngs led the Saxons to victory with 95½ points in the second annual affair, this year featuring six teams. DeKalb was second (76) and Hoffman third (67½).

KNUDSON, A SENIOR who just recently accepted an appointment to the Air Force Academy, flew away with wins in the 100-yard dash and the 220, clipping off 10.08 and 22.6 times. Youngs, only a soph, was third in both sprint events, running a 10.15 in the 100 and setting a meet record in the 220 prelims (22.5). He also placed in the pole vault at 12-0.

"Knudson's all fired up about his appointment and he's running really well now," said Schaumburg coach Denny Garber. "He's been on our varsity since he was a freshman, but he's been leading off relays and nobody's noticed him. The first recognition he got was when he won the conference 50 indoors."

Knudson led off the Saxon's win in the 440 relay, timed in 44.5, as Ways, Youngs and Mike Christy followed. Ways, a junior, ran 10.1 for a second place in the 100 and came back to break his own meet record in the 440 with a 50.05.

"That wind was really something — that's what killed me," said Ways who had to fight off the backstretch gale and eventually tired in the closing yards. "I didn't have anything left for the last 220."

CHRISTY, JUST back from an injury, looked strong in prelims of the 220 but slowed in the finals for 23.5 and fourth place. He also took second in the long jump and fourth in the shot put (49-6).

"It was a good day for our sprinters," said Garber, who also got first-place points from triple jumper Dave Mrozinski, a junior who reached a personal best 42-6½.

Hoffman's third-place effort was highlighted by another record performance by pole vaulter Paul Major, who cleared 14-6. The Hawk senior's main competition came from Schaumburg's Mark Sterle, who got 13-0 for the first time this season, and a pair of DeKalb vaulters.

HAWK HIGH JUMPER Ron Warring took first place with a 6-0 effort and sophomore John Biver got points in the 100 (10.15) and the 220 (23.5). Low hurdler Joe Rausch got second place with his first sub-:40 time, a 39.9.

In all, 11 meet records were broken and a pair of two-year-old track marks were shattered also — Knudson's 100 time and a 55-0 shot put by DeKalb's Krahnbuhl.

Major's 14-6 vault was two inches better than the one-year-old mark set by Hoffman's Dave Paape, who finished third in the state last year and who was on hand Saturday to give his ex-teammate a little coaching and encouragement.

The strong winds didn't appear to have an effect on Major, although none of his three attempts at 15-0 were even close to successful.

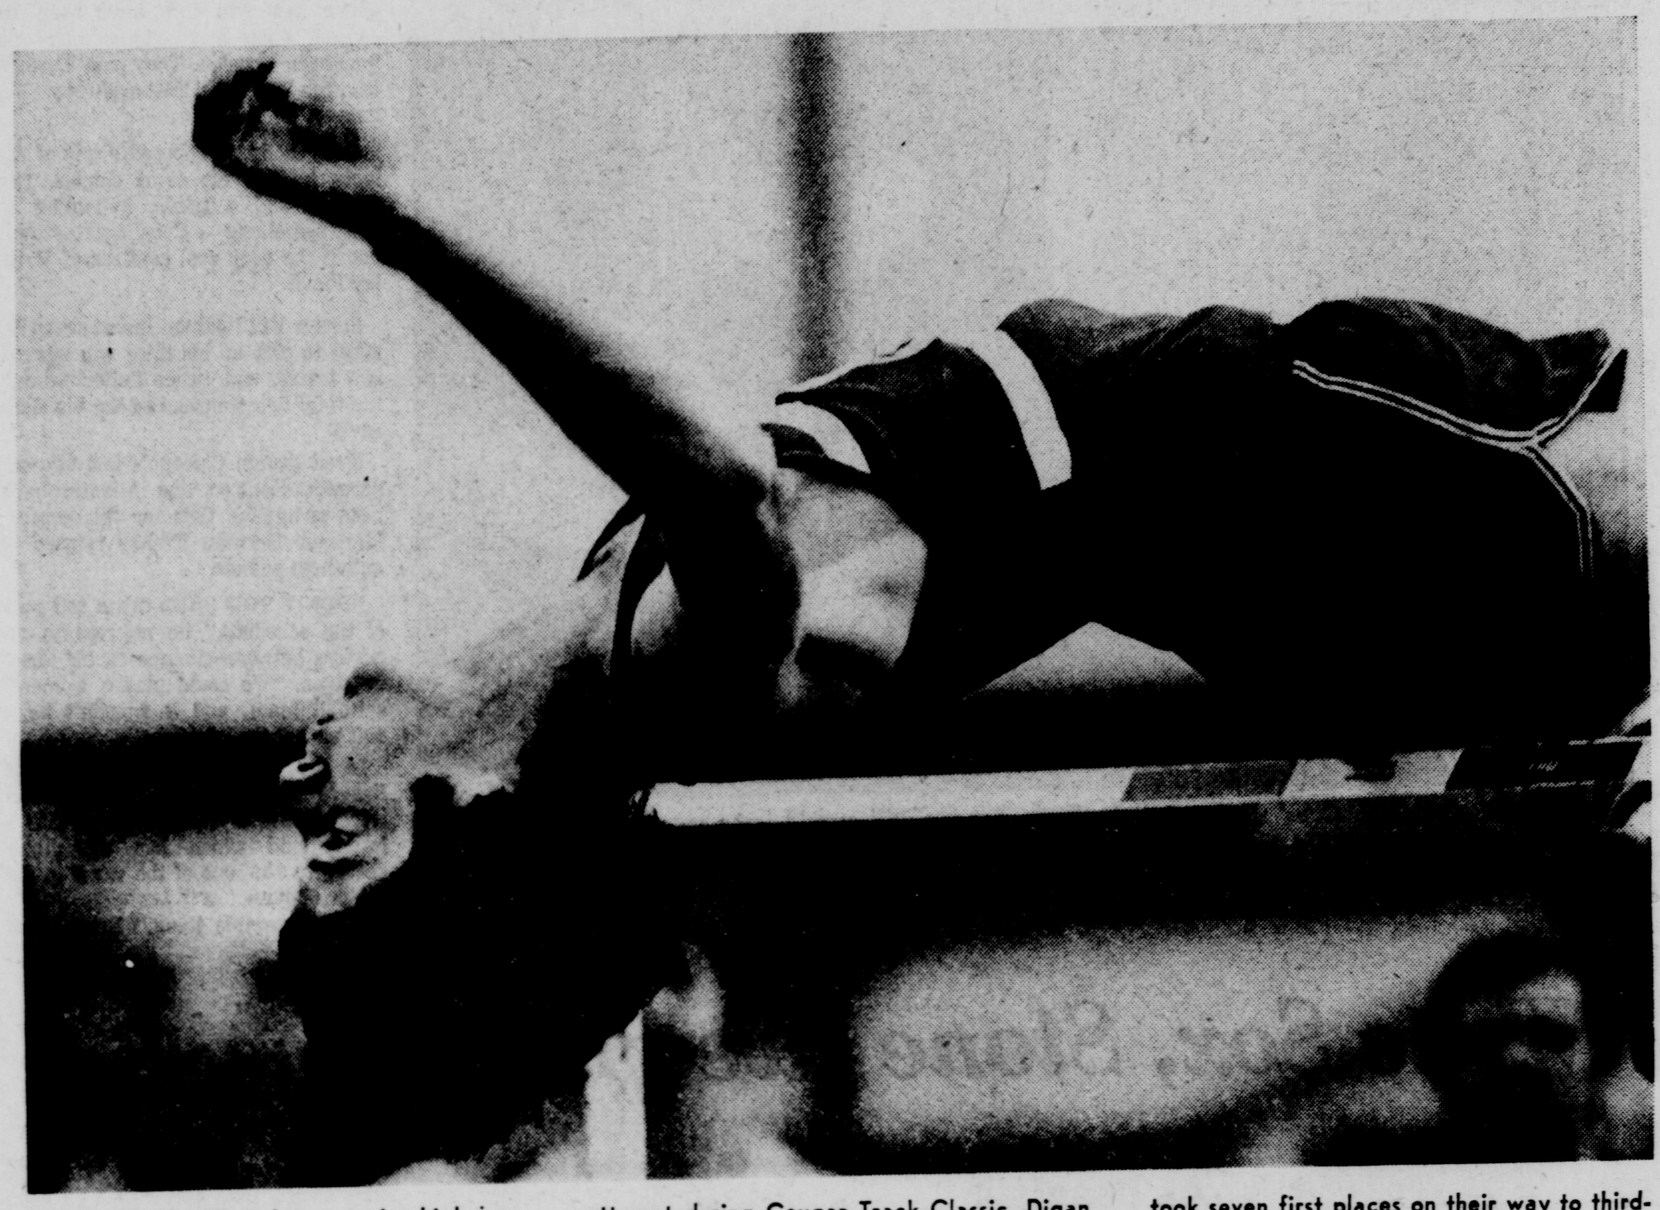

MAJOR, HOFFMAN and Schaumburg will have another shot at record-setting today in the Dist. 211 meet at Hoffman.

Another team of sprinters, the Rolling Meadows Mustangs, took the first-place trophy at the Crystal Lake Relays Friday night, beating 12 other squads, the most notable of which came all the way from Janesville, Wis.

Dave Boursaw and Rick Sutton led the charge, keying a win in the 440 relay (43.9). The Mustang speedsters finished two-three in the 100, Sutton with a 10.0 and Boursaw a 10.05. Boursaw then returned for a second spot in the 220 (22.5). Teammate Bill Kasper was fourth (22.9).

MEADOWS QUARTERMILER Pete Till ran a 50.9 for second place and the Mustangs' two-mile relay team took a runnerup spot as Mark Kasper, Dave Campbell, Tom Choice and Fred Kocian clocked 8:05.1. Choice came back for a 4:30 win in the mile run.

It was also a good day for Rolling Meadows weightmen Rich Huber, Scott Jennings and Bill Chauncey. Huber had season bests in winning the discus (157-11) and taking second in the shot (54-2). Jennings was third in the shot (53-6) and Chauncey was fifth (50-9).

Harper qualifies 3 for nationals

Wil Fieldhouse, Bob Roels and Mike Nichol each qualified for the national junior college track finals and their Harper teammates pulled out all the stops as the Hawks finished fourth in the Region IV championships at Moline Friday and Saturday.

Fieldhouse, a sophomore distance runner, won the mile in 4:20.9 and came back less than an hour later to take second place in the three-mile event in 15:17.

Roels, struggling with a bad back and a slippery discus circle, managed a first-place fling of 137-5. He returned the next day for a fourth in the shot put at 43-11½.

NICHOL'S 6-4 high jump effort was only good enough for third, but his season-best of 6-8 meets the qualifying standard so he will accompany Fieldhouse and Roels to the juco nationals May 20-21 in Houston.

"It was the best we've ever done in the region meet," said Harper coach Bob Nolan after his Hawks scored 41 points to finish behind winner Lincoln Land, DuPage and Blackhawk. "We were hoping for a third."

The rain on Friday night almost postponed the discus competition, but it went on as scheduled after a lengthy delay. Roels, suffering from a painful back pull that he incurred early last week, was several feet off his own personal best. Roels was a national qualifier last year.

"You've got to consider the conditions," Nolan pointed out. "They were really bad. We were very concerned, actually, that he might hurt himself."

His back was more of a factor Saturday in the shot put.

Fieldhouse's victory in the mile was more of a tactical race than an all-out assault on time. His second place in the longer, three-mile event came after he led for much of the race.

"I think Wil got a little tired about three-quarters through it," Nolan said.

Nolan's biggest disappointment was that intermediate hurdler Jim Lemke failed to qualify in this event. Lemke clipped a hurdle and managed to get only a seventh place in the race.

Other Harper places came from Tim Blechl, fourth in the six-mile; John Fabbrini, sixth in the 880; Augie Ziccarelli, seventh in the mile; and Curt Long, seventh in the three-mile.

"We had a good year,' said Nolan. "We broke a lot of school records and we did better in some areas than I expected."

HARPER'S THREE national qualifiers will continue to work out before leaving for Houston a week from Wednesday.

"I think all three have the potential to place nationally," said Nolan. "They'll have to come up with their best efforts."

the finals on Monday.

BUFFALO GROVE'S Phil Czosnyka and Hersey's Todd Walker hooked up in a taut pitcher's duel at the Huskie district. A pair of miscues accounted for the only scoring in a 1-0 Bison triumph.

In the second Czosnyka reached on a two-base throwing error and Scott Groot then singled up the middle. The ball was misgloved in center and Czosnyka came around to tally.

Walker whiffed eight, walked just two and allowed only three hits. Czosnyka struck out nine, walked one and yielded only two hits.

Buffalo Grove will tackle Arlington Monday after the Cardinals and Doug Harth bumped off Forest View 4-1.

HARTH ALLOWED only one hit and neither he nor Falcon hurler Bob Cook had an earned run charged against them. The Falcons opened scoring in the first on a walk, a sacrifice and Chris Hanson's popup, which was misgloved, allowing the run to scramble home.

The Cards tied the game in the second on a walk to Mike Mayerck. He advanced to second on an errant pickoff play, went to third on a ground out and raced home on Gary Kempton's single.

Three more Redbird runs in the fifth were the result of a walk, a fielder's choice, another error and a ground out. Ron Laramie broke up Harth's no hitter with a bloop single to right in the sixth.

TOM CURRAN struck out 18, put out a runner at first, assisted at first on another and his catcher tagged out a runner as Elk Grove rolled over Driscoll at the Maine West district, 6-3.

The only time any other Gren handled the ball was on one of five hits Driscoll poked out and Curran didn't even allow one of those until the fourth.

Elk Grove got four gift runs in the third on a walk to Tony Kees, Kevin McCloughan reaching on an error, a walk to Dave Sargent, a passed ball, another miscue and a single by Phil Willis.

In the sixth Joe Cannizzo and Kees walked and McCloughan doubled them in.

The Grenadiers now move against Fenton while Rolling Meadows faces off against the host Warriors today.

PROSPECT MOVED onto a collision course with Glenbrook North by tripping up Glenbrook South at the Maine North district, 3-1. The Spartans eliminated the host Norsemen 6-2.

Doug Clark went the route on the mound for the Knights, walking three and fanning six. His teammates gave him an early lead to work with when Dave Wille walked to open the game, advanced to third on a Mike Jennings double, and then boldly stole home.

In the third Prospect moved ahead 2-0 on back-to-back hits by Jennings, Paul Lundstedt and Brian DeValk. For insurance the Titans committed a pair of errors and a passed ball in the sixth, allowing Clark to move around the bases.

Hoffman Estates nipped Palatine 1-0 at Conant behind the third-hit twirling of Ray Gawron.

The Hawks scored the game's only run in the sixth when Bill Strawn singled, pilfered second and jetted home on a single by Bob Slawek. Slawek was pinch hitting for Gawron.

In Conant's other semifinal contest Fremd belted Schaumburg 12-2 with Ken Riplinger going the distance on the mound for the Vikings to notch the win. Saxon starter, and loser, Tim McCue was hit for five first inning runs and Fremd waltzed from there into a Monday afternoon title bout with the Hawks.

Palmer, who has won five straight games since an opening-day loss, was battered for 11 hits before Scott McGregor came on to save the game. Craig Reynolds went 4-4 for Seattle, while Oriole rookie Eddie Murray connected for his sixth homer of the season.

The win kept Baltimore a ½-game behind first-place New York in the American League East.

CRAIG NETTLES hit a three-run homer and Thurman Munson got four hits, including his fifth home run, and scored four runs, to lead Mike Torrez to victory over his former Oakland teammates. The loss went to Dock Ellis, who was recently traded by New York to Oakland in a deal for Torrez. The Yankees collected 16 hits against Oakland, while rookie sensations Mitchell Page and Wayne Gross belted homers for the A's off Torrez, now 5-1.

Dwight Evans' sixth homer of the season snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning, and Boston reliever Jim Willoughby pitched strongly for 4 1/3 innings to lead the Red Sox to victory. Evans stroked a 2-2 pitch off loser Gary Ross over the left field wall to help Willoughby record his second victory in two decisions.

The Brewers snapped a four-game losing streak behind rookie pitcher Bryan Haas. Dan Thomas hit a two-run home run in the fourth inning, and the Brewers were never caught. Bil Castro picked up his sixth save of the year.

Willie Horton hit a pair of two-run homers to help Bert Blyleven record his fourth win of the season. Horton belted a two-run shot in the first inning, and added his fifth homer of 1977 in the eighth . Blyleven, 4-2, held the Royals to six hits before Darold Knowles took over in the ninth.

DAVE GOLTZ won his first game of 1977, but the Twins had to hold off a Toronto rally that nearly overcame a 5-0 deficit. The Twins pounded out 14 hits, four by Rod Carew, and led 5-0 until the eight, when Toronto scored three times. Goltz was relieved by Tom Burgmeier in the eighth, and Tom Johnson came on in the ninth to get the final out.

Gym team captures 2 titles

The American Academy of Gymnastics, Inc. of Des Plaines captured two first place team awards at the 1977 Illinois State USGF Championships for Beginner and Intermediate Girls held at MacArthur Jr. High in Prospect Heights. Approximately 48 gymnastic clubs throughout the state were represented.

The Academy totaled 95.45 points for first place in the 10-11 year-old Beginner Division with Chris Bott again leading the charge with a top all-around of 32.90 by winning first beam (8.10), second floor (8.75), second bars (8.20), and fourth vault (7.85). Other members needed for team score were Amy Mategrano of Hoffman Estates taking fifth all-around (31.60), second beam (8.0), third bars (8.15), and sixth floor (8.4); Wendy Specht — ninth all-around (30.95), third floor (8.6) and third beam (7.75); and Ann Maddox who also tied for sixth on floor (8.4).

For the 12-14-year-old Intermediate Division, the Academy gained 96.95 pts. for top honors with April Yahiro heading her teammates by winning first all-around (33.05) and taking second on both floor (8.40) and beam (7.80) and ninth on vault (8.85) and bars (8.0). Geneen Deutsch was fifth all-around (32.15) by placing second bars (8.50), fifth beam (7.55) and seventh floor (8.10), while Sandy Sobotka took tenth all-around (31.75) by winning third bars (8.35) and fifth floor (8.20). Other members of the Academy who placed on individual events were: Raeanne Sutz — second bars (8.5) and fifth vault (9.1), Desiree Gorak — seventh bars (8.10) and eighth vault (8.90), Jill Wollenberg of Arlington Heights — ninth vault (8.85) and tenth floor (7.90), Margie Budd — ninth vault (8.85), and Cathy Adams — tenth bars (7.95).

A 'hot' day for Saxons' sprinters

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

Saturday wasn't a perfect day for sprinters, but Schaumburg's explosive corps of speed merchants tuned up the afterburners for next week's Mid-Suburban finals with a near-sweep of the sprint events at the Hoffman Relays.

Strong crosswinds and temperatures in the mid-50s made it all the harder, but Steve Knudson, Jeff Ways and Pat Youngs led the Saxons to victory with 95½ points in the second annual affair, this year featuring six teams. DeKalb was second (76) and Hoffman third (67½).

KNUDSON, A SENIOR who just recently accepted an appointment to the Air Force Academy, flew away with wins in the 100-yard dash and the 220, clipping off 10.08 and 22.6 times. Youngs, only a soph, was third in both sprint events, running a 10.15 in the 100 and setting a meet record in the 220 prelims (22.5). He also placed in the pole vault at 12-0.

"Knudson's all fired up about his appointment and he's running really well now," said Schaumburg coach Denny Garber. "He's been on our varsity since he was a freshman, but he's been leading off relays and nobody's noticed him. The first recognition he got was when he won the conference 50 indoors."

Shortstop experiment quietly fails

No room on roster for Kevin Bell

Most experiments succeed with a fanfare and fail very quietly, so it came as no surprise last week when the White Sox quietly canceled the great Kevin Bell experiment.

A young third baseman with great potential, Bell was hustled down to the minors the final week of spring training when the Sox traded Bucky Dent to the Yankees. Bell's mission — learn how to play shortstop.

Young Kevin was to rejoin the team a few weeks into the season, but now a month is gone and Bell is still down on the farm — playing third base again.

Though Bell apparently mastered the mechanics of shortstop adequately, the superb play of Alan Bannister at short has canceled the need for Bell to switch positions. And Eric Soderholm, who moved Bell off third in the first place, shows no signs of letting up from his hitting pace. Bannister's hitting over .300 and defensively

Byline report

is the best to man that position for the Sox since Luis Apraicio, with excellent range.

"They told me I'd be with Iowa about 10 days. Then after eight days, they called me and said they had no room on the roster right then," said Bell in New Orleans, where Iowa was playing. "I've been playing third base since this road trip began. They told me to take ground balls at short during practice."

Roland Hemond, Sox vice-president and right hand man to Bill Veeck, admits that the Bell experiment is over and that Bell could rejoin the club by mid-season, or not at all this year.

"We put him back at third because we didn't want him to forget the position," Hemond said. "When he comes back is anybody's guess. With Soderholm's knees and the fact that he didn't play at all last year, you don't know. And somebody could get hurt."

Happily for all involved Bell is taking his unexpected demotion in his usual good-natured style.

"I really don't mind all that much," he said. "I figure sooner or later I'll be up there. If I were there now I wouldn't be hitting every day and I need that."

The Sox haven't lost any of the hope they have for the 21-year-old, good-looking blond who hit .248 in 68 games last year in the majors and was an instant hit with the fans. They've signed him to a two-year contract.

The fact that Bell can stay in the minors points out the fact the Sox have more depth than they did last year, something Hemond was quick to point out.

"In the past we've had problems because we've had to rush players along. They were playing up here before they were ready," Hemond said. "Guys like Chet Lemon and Jorge Orta were brought along too fast and it was painfully obvious last year. Now you can see the improvement."

The way Bannister and Soderholm are playing, will Bell be moved to another position, say left field, where the Sox need help?

There's no plans for that right now, but if Soderholm holds up physically and the Sox can afford the huge increase in salary he'll demand next year, don't be surprised if the great Kevin Bell experiment is revived again.

THE GREAT WALLENDA nears the end of his walk along a 600-foot-long high wire strung from the upper deck in left field to the upper deck in right field at Candlestick Park in San Francisco Sunday between games of the Giants-Mets twinbill. Struggling Reds fall again

NL baseball

The Cincinnati Reds are looking like anything but world champions.

A two-run double by Dave Parker, one of two hits for the Pirate right fielder in the game, capped a three-run seventh inning and helped Pittsburgh to a 6-4 victory over Cincinnati Sunday and a sweep of their three-game series.

Parker's double brought the Pirates back from a 4-3 deficit and gave reliever Odell Jones his first major league victory after pitching two scoreless innings. Rich Gossage came on in the eighth to gain his fourth save.

BILL ROBINSON and Phil Garner backed Parker's hitting with solo homers while Fernando Gonzalez had a pinch-hit RBI single in the seventh inning rally. Johnny Bench smacked a two-run homer for the Reds, whose starter Fred Norman suffered his second loss against one win.

Parker's two hits increased his consecutive-game hitting streak to 19. The Reds' Pete Rose saw his streak snapped at 20 games.

In other National league action, St. Louis edged Houston 2-1, and San Francisco took New York in both ends of a doubleheader, 4-2 and 10-0 in 6½ innings in a rain-shortened nightcap.

Montreal at San Diego and Philadelphia at Los Angeles were postponed because of rain.

BAKE McBRIDE HIT a run-scoring single in the third to tie the game and came home with the winning run on Keith Hernandez' base hit as the Cards dumped the Astros with the aid of the season's first triple play in the NL. With runners on first and second in the third inning, Willie Crawford lined to second baseman Mike Tyson in the third inning. Tyson flipped to shortstop Don Kessinger to catch Enos Cabell off the bag at second and Kessinger then relayed on to Hernandez at first to beat Cesar Cedeno to the base. Reliever Buddy Schultz picked up his first victory in relief.

Jim Barr, with relief help in the ninth from Gary Lavelle and Randy Moffitt, won his fifth decision in his last six starts as the Giants dropped the Mets in the first game. The Giants scored two runs in the fourth on Marc Hill's RBI single and a triple by Terry Whitfield and Willie McCovey, who had three hits in the game, drove in the fourth run in the seventh. Lee Mazzilli drove in the Mets' first run in the second with a double and Dave Kingman singled home John Milner in the ninth with their other tally.

In the nightcap, John Curtis pitched a two-hitter over 6 1-3 innings before rain ended the contest. Curtis, Tim Foli and Rob Andrews each had three hits for the Giants as Jon Matlack was roughed up for 10 runs, seven of them earned, and 12 hits before rain allowed the Mets a reprieve. San Francisco's sweep upped it into second place while the Mets slipped deeper into the National League East cellar.

Derby winner Seattle Slew to Pimlico for Preakness

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Kentucky Derby winner Seattle Slew will definitely start in the Preakness Stakes, May 21, the colt's trainer, Billy Turner, said Sunday.

Turner said he would fly from Louisville to Seattle Slew's home base at Belmont Park on Sunday and would probably arrive at Pimlico early next week.

According to Pimlico officials, it looks like there will be a probable field of seven starters — Seattle Slew, Cormorant, J. O. Tobin, Sanhedrin, Run Dusty Run, For The Moment, and Affiliate. They said there is the possibility of additional entries within the next 10 days.

British champion J. O. Tobin and Cormorant, the 3-year-old colt that is undefeated this year, are training in Maryland now as they prepare to take on the Derby winner.

Dodgers' Cey has already had good year in baseball

Jim Murray

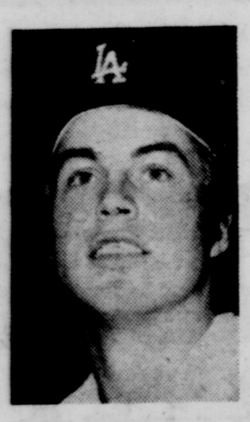

If the Los Angeles Dodgers had fed the name, rank and serial number and the 20-game April statistics of their third baseman, Ronald Charles Cey, into a computer and asked for a prognosis for the rest of this season, the machine would have gone into a coughing fit and then spit out the following information:

"You will hit 72 home runs, you will bat in 240 runs, you will get 248 hits, score 160 runs, get 160 walks and bat over 400.

"You are Babe Ruth. Go immediately to the Hall of Fame. Do not stop at The Sporting News."

THE WAY RON CEY was going, the game was beginning to dust off the old war cry, "Break up the Dodgers!" — or at least their third baseman. The Big Inning, made famous by the old Ruthian Yankees who could be presumed to have another team right where it wanted it when it was only down by nine runs, was having its best year since the Babe quit.

Ron Cey

With 140 games to go, Ron Cey already has had a good season — with nine homers, 29 runs-batted-in, 21 walks and five doubles. "Has Lasorda been feeding him Ty Cobb pills?" rival third baseman Pete Rose wanted to know. Were Joe DiMaggio's records next? Was even Henry Aaron safe? Pitchers began going back to the drawing boards. Infielders crept back when he came to bat. No one had seen this kind of assault on the center-field seats since Ted Williams hung them up.

Heretofore, Ron Cey had been more widely celebrated for his configuration than his homers. He didn't walk, he waddled. His torso began at the knees and ended at his ears. He was only 5-10 but 5-8 of it was back. Strong back. In a tuxedo, he looked like a cigarette ad; on the field, a penguin in a batting helmet.

He was born to be a cartoon character. And, like the model for that other cartoon character Yogi Berra, the bat had that short, vicious chop that made it impossible for a fastball to get by without being hit hard somewhere.

I WENT DOWN TO the locker room the other night to see why this penguin had started to fly. The chest, while rock-hard, had not swelled up to 58 expanded. Neither had the head. The belly was washboard-ribbed and not hanging over the belt like a home-run hitter's should. The oak-stump legs put a severe strain on the sanitary socks and the elastic uniform pants.

This is the body that the doctors say, when weighed in water, shows less fat on it than a hungry lion's. But Ron Cey still looks more like a refugee from an Antarctic ice floe than the Pride of the Yankees. Cey is one of those fortunate people who will look 20 till he's over 70, but the clear skin and the wide blue eyes do not conjure up the barbed-wire bearded image of a guy who scares pitchers, makes outfielders curse and infielders play his drives with their glove in front of their eyes. Somehow, he didn't look like the Sultan of Swat.

Cey laughed at the suggestion he was. "Babe Ruth's record is safe," he assured me. "So is Joe DiMaggio's. Also I expect to come up a few home runs short of Henry Aaron."

Well, then, what triggered his spring explosion, probably the fastest start since Bonnie and Clyde left their last bank? Cey looked serious. "It's mainly my position in the lineup," he explained. "I'm very well protected this year."

PROTECTED? "YES," went on Cey. "Your position in the lineup dictates the kind of pitches you see. Last year, I batted lower in the order. I batted fifth, with Bill Russell behind me. In that case, a pitcher has to ask himself if he wants to risk one run or three. In that case, he's either going to not pitch to me at all or give me bad pitches to hit, not caring whether he walks me."

What Ron referred to was the well-worn baseball technique known as "pitching around" a batter. It calls for the pitcher to risk losing a batter rather than losing the ball.

It's interesting to note history is on Cey's side. Almost without exception, every devastating batter in baseball history has found himself strategically placed in the lineup with dangerous hitters on both sides of him, like guards outside a bigshot's office.

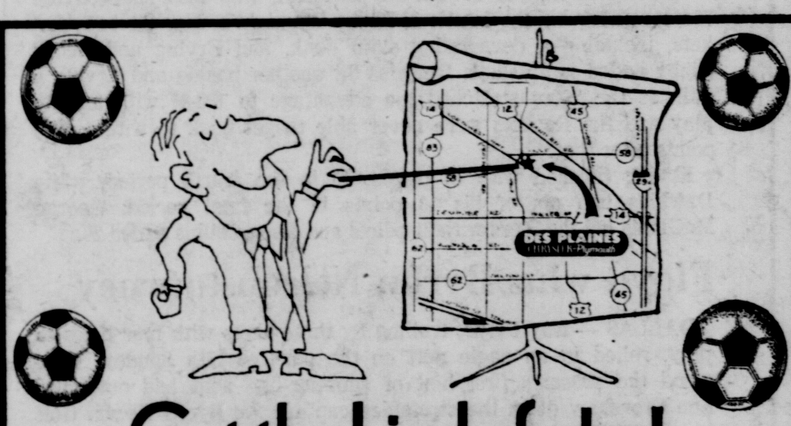

Babe Ruth set the all-time record for bases on balls (2,056). But he would have walked every time up if he didn't have Lou Gehrig batting behind him. Great hitters need great lineups. Or they find themselves looking at a steady diet of bouncing curveballs, floating changeups, fist-close sliders — or breaking balls in the rib cage.

"WITH STEVE GARVEY behind me and Reggie Smith in front of me, I see more good pitches in a night than I used to see in a month," Cey explains.

But getting a good pitch to hit is one thing. Knowing how to hit it is another. Ruth sandwiched 714 home runs around his 2,056 walks. Ted Williams managed 2,654 hits around his 2,019 (second-highest all-time) walks. Cobb got 4,191 hits — but he got lots of good pitches. He only walked 1,249 times.

Ron Cey does not expect to join that pantheon just yet. Before that happens, he looks for the curves to start bouncing again, and the "Look out!" pitches to start flying at his helmet instead of the plate. Ron Cey realizes one April does not a career make. Or even a season. But what he points out is, "What makes me happy is not what Ron Cey did in April, it's what the team did."

He's right. What the team did would really consternate the computer. At 17-3 for April for an .850 percentage which would upset the balance of baseball to an extent the league would have to call in Charlie Finley to disband the franchise and Ron Cey would be outlawed and exiled to the South Pole.

Shortstop experiment quietly fails

No room on roster for Kevin Bell

Byline report

Bob Gallas

Most experiments succeed with a fanfare and fail very quietly, so it came as no surprise last week when the White Sox quietly canceled the great Kevin Bell experiment.

A young third baseman with great potential, Bell was hustled down to the minors the final week of spring training when the Sox traded Bucky Dent to the Yankees. Bell's mission — learn how to play shortstop.

Young Kevin was to rejoin the team a few weeks into the season, but now a month is gone and Bell is still down on the farm — playing third base again.

Though Bell apparently mastered the mechanics of shortstop adequately, the superb play of Alan Bannister at short has canceled the need for Bell to switch positions. And Eric Soderholm, who moved Bell off third in the first place, shows no signs of letting up from his hitting pace. Bannister's hitting over .300 and defensively is the best to man that position for the Sox since Luis Apraicio, with excellent range.

"They told me I'd be with Iowa about 10 days. Then after eight days, they called me and said they had no room on the roster right then," said Bell in New Orleans, where Iowa was playing. "I've been playing third base since this road trip began. They told me to take ground balls at short during practice."

Roland Hemond, Sox vice-president and right hand man to Bill Veeck, admits that the Bell experiment is over and that Bell could rejoin the club by mid-season, or not at all this year.

"We put him back at third because we didn't want him to forget the position," Hemond said. "When he comes back is anybody's guess. With Soderholm's knees and the fact that he didn't play at all last year, you don't know. And somebody could get hurt."

Happily for all involved Bell is taking his unexpected demotion in his usual good-natured style.

"I really don't mind all that much," he said. "I figure sooner or later I'll be up there. If I were there now I wouldn't be hitting every day and I need that."

The Sox haven't lost any of the hope they have for the 21-year-old, good-looking blond who hit .248 in 68 games last year in the majors and was an instant hit with the fans. They've signed him to a two-year contract.

The fact that Bell can stay in the minors points out the fact the Sox have more depth than they did last year, something Hemond was quick to point out.

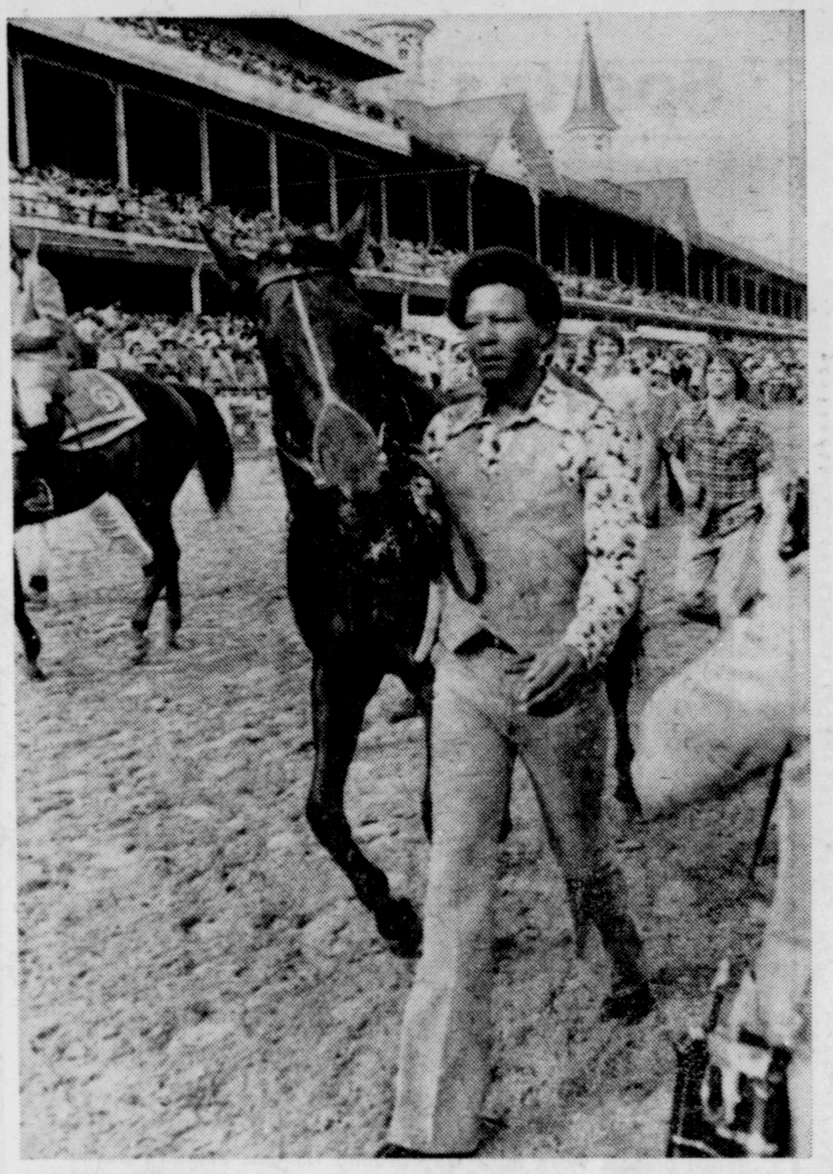

Kevin Bell

"In the past we've had problems because we've had to rush players along. They were playing up here before they were ready," Hemond said. "Guys like Chet Lemon and Jorge Orta were brought along too fast and it was painfully obvious last year. Now you can see the improvement."

The way Bannister and Soderholm are playing, will Bell be moved to another position, say left field, where the Sox need help?

There's no plans for that right now, but if Soderholm holds up physically and the Sox can afford the huge increase in salary he'll demand next year, don't be surprised if the great Kevin Bell experiment is revived again.

IN A CLASSIC battle of the giants, former UCLA stars Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers and Bill Walton of the Trail Blazers work their way around the Los Angeles basket during first quarter action of game two of the NBA Western Conference finals Sunday. Portland won, 99-97.

Gilliam gives Blazers 2-0 edge over Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Veteran Herm Gilliam hit a scoop shot with 1:03 to go and Lionel Hollins added a free throw with 11 seconds remaining Sunday to give the Portland Trail Blazers a 99-97 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers for a 2-0 lead in their NBA semifinal playoff series.

Gilliam, a backcourt reserve behind Hollins and rookie Johnny Davis, scored five crucial baskets in the last 5:39 as the Trail Blazers rebounded from a seven-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers won his personal battle with Bill Walton by pouring in 40 points to only 14 for the Portland center. But he missed a shot with five seconds left that would have tied the game.

Abdul-Jabbar made a stuff shot with 1:22 to play to put the Lakers ahead 97-96. But Gilliam, who finished with 24 points including 14 in the fourth period, put Portland ahead for good with his scoop shot.

Hollins, who led the Portland attack with 31 points, 22 of them in the first half, was fouled by Don Ford after Gilliam missed a shot and hit the second of two free throws to put the Trail Blazers in front by two.

Abdul-Jabbar and Walton each got 17 rebounds while Walton had two assists to one for Abdul-Jabbar and held a 4-3 edge in blocked shots. In addition to his 31 points, Hollins had seven assists.

Dawkins sparks Philadelphia again

PHILADELPHIA — Darryl Dawkins again came off the bench Sunday and teamed with Julius Erving to lead a fourth quarter rally that carried the Philadelphia 76ers to a 106-97 win over the Houston Rockets in the second game of the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

The victory gave the 76ers a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with the two teams playing in Houston Wednesday and Friday.

In the stretch, the 20-year-old Dawkins, who also sparked the 76ers coming off the bench in Thursday night's win, hit two baskets, including a devastating slam dunk, and Erving and Henry Bibby added jump shots. Dawkins hit another basket and Erving a pair as the 76ers stretched the advantage to 100-85 with 3:26 to play and the Rockets were never able to get back to within nine points after that.

Erving finished with 18 points, 10 in the fourth period, while Dawkins had six of his 13 points in the final period. George McGinnis led the 76ers with 21 points and Doug Collins added 20.

Floyd wins Byron Nelson tourney

DALLAS — Ray Floyd, trailing by three shots with four holes to play, rolled in an eagle putt on the par-five 15th Sunday, withstood the season's first hint of summer-like heat and outdueled Ben Crenshaw down the stretch to capture the Byron Nelson Golf Classic by two shots.

It was the first triumph of the year for Floyd, who last year fulfilled his potential by running away with the Masters and earning almost $200,000.

Floyd fired a two-under par 69 over the Preston Trail Golf Club course for a 72-hole total of eight-under 276, good for the top prize of $40,000.

Crenshaw, who also was looking for his first win of 1977, shot a 71 for a 278 and took home $22,800.

Andy Bean, who opened the tournament with a horrendous 79, put together a 67 Sunday and tied Lyn Lott for third place at five-under 279. Each earned $11,800.

Sweden routes Austria in Davis Cup

STOCKHOLM — Sweden, playing without Bjorn Borg, blanked Austria 5-0 to move into the European Zone B Davis Cup semifinals Sunday along with Spain, which downed Yugoslavia 4-1.

Sweden will play defending champion Italy for a place in the zone final while in the other semifinal Spain will face Hungary.

Romania won a controversial 3-1 victory over Czechoslovakia in Zone B in Bucharest with Ilie Nastase getting the crucial singles win Sunday against Jan Kodes, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4. On the first day, Czech Jiri Hrebec stormed off the court to protest the Australian referee's decision to change several line calls.

Sweden's Rolf Norberg and Kjell Johanson completed the rout of Austria. Norberg downed Hans Norberg, 9-7, 6-4, 6-4, and Johanson beat Cliff Letcher 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

Sports people

Phil Esposito, the captain of Team Canada, was handed a serious warning by the International Ice Hockey Federation Sunday for refusing to shake hands with Finnish referee Raimo Sepponen after Friday's match against Russia. The Soviets embarrassed Canada in that game, 8-1.

Western Illinois centerfielder Ken Butzen was listed last week as the nation's seventh best NCAA Division I producer of doubles. The former Forest View standout also leads the Leathernecks in total bases with 43.

IN A CLASSIC battle of the giants, former UCLA stars Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers and Bill Walton of the Trail Blazers work their way around the Los Angeles basket during first quarter action of game two of the NBA Western Conference finals Sunday. Portland won, 99-97.

Gilliam gives Blazers 2-0 edge over Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Veteran Herm Gilliam hit a scoop shot with 1:03 to go and Lionel Hollins added a free throw with 11 seconds remaining Sunday to give the Portland Trail Blazers a 99-97 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers for a 2-0 lead in their NBA semifinal playoff series.

Gilliam, a backcourt reserve behind Hollins and rookie Johnny Davis, scored five crucial baskets in the last 5:39 as the Trail Blazers rebounded from a seven-point deficit in the fourth quarter.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers won his personal battle with Bill Walton by pouring in 40 points to only 14 for the Portland center. But he missed a shot with five seconds left that would have tied the game.

Abdul-Jabbar made a stuff shot with 1:22 to play to put the Lakers ahead 97-96. But Gilliam, who finished with 24 points including 14 in the fourth period, put Portland ahead for good with his scoop shot.

Hollins, who led the Portland attack with 31 points, 22 of them in the first half, was fouled by Don Ford after Gilliam missed a shot and hit the second of two free throws to put the Trail Blazers in front by two.

Abdul-Jabbar and Walton each got 17 rebounds while Walton had two assists to one for Abdul-Jabbar and held a 4-3 edge in blocked shots. In addition to his 31 points, Hollins had seven assists.

Dawkins sparks Philadelphia again

PHILADELPHIA — Darryl Dawkins again came off the bench Sunday and teamed with Julius Erving to lead a fourth quarter rally that carried the Philadelphia 76ers to a 106-97 win over the Houston Rockets in the second game of the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

The victory gave the 76ers a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with the two teams playing in Houston Wednesday and Friday.

In the stretch, the 20-year-old Dawkins, who also sparked the 76ers coming off the bench in Thursday night's win, hit two baskets, including a devastating slam dunk, and Erving and Henry Bibby added jump shots. Dawkins hit another basket and Erving a pair as the 76ers stretched the advantage to 100-85 with 3:26 to play and the Rockets were never able to get back to within nine points after that.

Erving finished with 18 points, 10 in the fourth period, while Dawkins had six of his 13 points in the final period. George McGinnis led the 76ers with 21 points and Doug Collins added 20.

Floyd wins Byron Nelson tourney

DALLAS — Ray Floyd, trailing by three shots with four holes to play, rolled in an eagle putt on the par-five 15th Sunday, withstood the season's first hint of summer-like heat and outdueled Ben Crenshaw down the stretch to capture the Byron Nelson Golf Classic by two shots.

It was the first triumph of the year for Floyd, who last year fulfilled his potential by running away with the Masters and earning almost $200,000.

Floyd fired a two-under par 69 over the Preston Trail Golf Club course for a 72-hole total of eight-under 276, good for the top prize of $40,000.

Crenshaw, who also was looking for his first win of 1977, shot a 71 for a 278 and took home $22,800.

Andy Bean, who opened the tournament with a horrendous 79, put together a 67 Sunday and tied Lyn Lott for third place at five-under 279. Each earned $11,800.

Sweden routes Austria in Davis Cup

STOCKHOLM — Sweden, playing without Bjorn Borg, blanked Austria 5-0 to move into the European Zone B Davis Cup semifinals Sunday along with Spain, which downed Yugoslavia 4-1.

Sweden will play defending champion Italy for a place in the zone final while in the other semifinal Spain will face Hungary.

Romania won a controversial 3-1 victory over Czechoslovakia in Zone B in Bucharest with Ilie Nastase getting the crucial singles win Sunday against Jan Kodes, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4. On the first day, Czech Jiri Hrebec stormed off the court to protest the Australian referee's decision to change several line calls.

Sweden's Rolf Norberg and Kjell Johanson completed the rout of Austria. Norberg downed Hans Norberg, 9-7, 6-4, 6-4, and Johanson beat Cliff Letcher 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

Sports people

Phil Esposito, the captain of Team Canada, was handed a serious warning by the International Ice Hockey Federation Sunday for refusing to shake hands with Finnish referee Raimo Sepponen after Friday's match against Russia. The Soviets embarrassed Canada in that game, 8-1.

Western Illinois centerfielder Ken Butzen was listed last week as the nation's seventh best NCAA Division I producer of doubles. The former Forest View standout also leads the Leathernecks in total bases with 43.

Oswald: "The standard safety play is one of the simplest. It is illustrated by today's hand."

Jim: "South is interested in seven when he finds that his partner holds three aces. He checks for kings and when he finds that the opponents hold the king of trumps he abandons seven and settles for six."

Oswald: "Since he misses the king, jack and two other trumps he isn't sure of six, but has a very good play for it. He isn't going to bring the contract home if West holds king-jack-small or all four trumps in back of him, but there is a safety play at his disposal to bring the slam home against any other trump combination."

Jim: "He wins the club in his own hand and lays down the ace of spades. If an honor fails to fall he will go over to dummy and lead the second round of spades from there."

Oswald: "This time the king drops from West. Now South goes over to dummy, finesses against East's jack and makes seven."

Jim: "If South had won the first club in dummy, led a trump and finessed his queen he might still be there, worrying about what to do next."

Time in zones of world set at Greenwich

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Larry Zimmer, 9, of Menomonee Falls, Wis., for his question:

HOW DO WE GET CORRECT TIME?

When it is noon in your town, it is midnight in a town exactly on the other side of the world. The world is divided into 24 time belts along longitudinal lines — the up and down lines that run from the north to the south. The lines also are called meridians, and all the land within the same meridian has the same time.

A village called Greenwich (pronounced gren-ich) located about six miles from London, England, was the place from which most nations agreed correct time would originate. The Royal Observatory, which stood directly on the Greenwich meridian, was moved in 1953 to the 15th-century Herstmonceux Castle in southeast England because London had spread out so much and city lights and smokey fog interferred with observations necessary for calling the correct time. Greenwich time is carefully figured by astronomers now from the observatory at Herstmonceux.

Since 1884 the chief nations of the world agreed on a system of broad time zones, in each of which there is a standard time based on the time at Greenwich. When it is noon in Greenwich it is 1 p.m. in Rome and 7 a.m. in New York and Toronto. It is also 6 a.m. in Wisconsin, 5 a.m. in Utah and 4 a.m. in California and British Columbia.

Standard time was first proposed by Charles Dowd, an American educator, and officially adopted in 1883. Railroad men of the United States and Canada accepted the idea before other countries and helped to establish the plan for a standard correct time.

The first time zone in Canada and the United States is called Eastern. Then moving west, we have the Central, Mountain and Pacific times, each one hour behind its neighbor. In northwestern North America there are three more time zones: Juneau, Central Alaskan and Nome. Central Alaskan is two hours slower then Pacific time and five hours slower than Eastern.

Correct Greenwich time is calculated by astronomers at the Royal Greenwich Observatory on a regular schedule throughout the day, and readings are sent to all parts of the world. And it beats the system of having everyone set his own watch at 12 when the sun is directly overhead.

The 24 time belts around the world are not drawn as straight lines, but rather follow a sensible pattern that take in location of cities and other considerations. At sea the lines are straight.

Each of the 24 zones are, generally, 15 degrees wide.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Victor Napolitano, 10, of Buckeye, Ariz., for his question:

WHO INVENTED THE GAME OF CHESS?

The game of chess came from India. In the sixth century it found its way to Persia where it became very popular. When the Arabians took possession of Persia in the seventh century, they also took possession of chess as their favorite game.

The ancient Vikings, we have discovered, played chess very seriously. By the 11th century the game was enjoyed and appreciated all across Europe.

Early chess had great differences between it and the game played today. Chess as we know it now dates from the 16th century when the last rules change, "castling," was introduced.

The first international chess tournament took place in the 16th century when the Italian masters visited Spain. The Italians won.

Safest play for small slam

Oswald: "The standard safety play is one of the simplest. It is illustrated by today's hand."

Jim: "South is interested in seven when he finds that his partner holds three aces. He checks for kings and when he finds that the opponents hold the king of trumps he abandons seven and settles for six."

Oswald: "Since he misses the king, jack and two other trumps he isn't sure of six, but has a very good play for it. He isn't going to bring the contract home if West holds king-jack-small or all four trumps in back of him, but there is a safety play at his disposal to bring the slam home against any other trump combination."

Jim: "He wins the club in his own hand and lays down the ace of spades. If an honor fails to fall he will go over to dummy and lead the second round of spades from there."

Oswald: "This time the king drops from West. Now South goes over to dummy, finesses against East's jack and makes seven."

Jim: "If South had won the first club in dummy, led a trump and finessed his queen he might still be there, worrying about what to do next."

Ask Andy

Time in zones of world set at Greenwich

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Larry Zimmer, 9, of Menomonee Falls, Wis., for his question:

HOW DO WE GET CORRECT TIME?

When it is noon in your town, it is midnight in a town exactly on the other side of the world. The world is divided into 24 time belts along longitudinal lines — the up and down lines that run from the north to the south. The lines also are called meridians, and all the land within the same meridian has the same time.

A village called Greenwich (pronounced gren-ich) located about six miles from London, England, was the place from which most nations agreed correct time would originate. The Royal Observatory, which stood directly on the Greenwich meridian, was moved in 1953 to the 15th-century Herstmonceux Castle in southeast England because London had spread out so much and city lights and smokey fog interferred with observations necessary for calling the correct time. Greenwich time is carefully figured by astronomers now from the observatory at Herstmonceux.

Since 1884 the chief nations of the world agreed on a system of broad time zones, in each of which there is a standard time based on the time at Greenwich. When it is noon in Greenwich it is 1 p.m. in Rome and 7 a.m. in New York and Toronto. It is also 6 a.m. in Wisconsin, 5 a.m. in Utah and 4 a.m. in California and British Columbia.

Standard time was first proposed by Charles Dowd, an American educator, and officially adopted in 1883. Railroad men of the United States and Canada accepted the idea before other countries and helped to establish the plan for a standard correct time.

The 24 time belts around the world are not drawn as straight lines, but rather follow a sensible pattern that take in location of cities and other considerations. At sea the lines are straight.

ARE YOU A DOUBLE AGENT?

An ambitious go-getter with the ability to be both a great salesperson and a terrific administrator? We're one of the largest publicly-owned mortgage bankers in the country with an opportunity for you to "break cover." Lum and Abner live on at Pine Ridge museum

by PAUL F. PARSONS

PINE RIDGE, Ark. (UPI) — Inside the weather-beaten old store, Dorothy McClure happily spends her days with the voices and memorabilia of Lum Edwards, Abner Peabody, Grandpappy Spears and Sister Simpson.

There's the checkerboard precariously balanced on a wooden crate between two cane-bottomed chairs. There's the pot-bellied stove. Horse collars. Homemade sorghum.

It was Dick Huddleston's Store in tiny Pine Ridge, population 22, that gave inspiration to two young men growing up nearby — Chester Lauck (Lum) and Norris Goff (Abner). As Lum and Abner, they entertained millions with colorful tales of country life during the radio days of the 1930s and 1940s.

DOROTHY McCLURE IS the proprietor of Dick Huddleston's Store and its next-door neighbor, the Lum and Abner Museum.

On a trip in 1968, she and her late husband Ralph passed through Pine Ridge, nestled in the foothills of the Quachita Mountains, and stopped at the store, the original model for Lum and Abner's famous "Jot 'em Down Store."

"We fell in love with the store and bought it, immediately went back home to California to pack, and we moved to Pine Ridge," said Mrs. McClure, who admits to being a nostalgia buff. "Our friends in California thought we had lost our minds."

Her husband, a retired Fresno, Calif., door manufacturer, died in 1972 but Mrs. McClure keeps the Lum and Abner Museum open and growing.

"WHY, WE FILLED two large notebooks with guests to the museum last year," she said. "We had someone from every state and from five foreign countries."

She said she doesn't keep a head count because she lets busloads of senior citizens skip the 50 cent admission charge.

"I like listening to the senior citizens reminisce about how they used to share an earphone with someone who had a radio and listen to Lum and Abner," she said.

She likes listening to the children, too.

"CHILDREN 8 TO 16 years of age are very, very interested," she said. "A lot of times their parents don't go through the museum and the children will spend an hour in there. Just all of them have heard Lum and Abner."

Reruns of the old series still are heard on 107 stations nationwide.

Today, Chester Lauck is a popular public speaker when he isn't enjoying retirement in Hot Springs, Ark. Norris Goff plays a lot of golf at his retirement community of Indian Wells, Calif.

"Chester comes all the time. He was here last year," said Mrs. McClure. "But it's been a long time since Norris was here. Maybe we can get him to come this summer."

80-year old U of C telescope still reads 'fine print' in the sky

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis. (UPI) — If scientific technology is impatient and heartless, an 80-year telescope should be outmoded.

But the great refractor at the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory is not some senile relic, unable to read the fine print of the night sky.

Instead, like some crazed collegian cramming for exams, the iron leviathan still attracts the all-nighters at the drop of the sun.

NEXT TO YERKES' two modern reflecting telescopes, the 63-foot long, 20-ton veteran seems an anachronism. Yet, its two 40-inch lenses make it the largest refracting — light-bending — telescope in the world.

Reflecting telescopes of comparable power are smaller, cheaper and able to receive images not broken into colors as they are by going through glass lenses. The refractor, however, played a part in the major discovery in 1952 that our galaxy has a spiral structure.

Now it is devoted to determining fundamental distances to all nearby stars, others that are physically interesting and monitoring star motions.

Results are published in journals to allow other observatories a chance to check the figures.

"WE ARE ONE of three or four observatories in the world doing this," said Yerkes director L. M. Hobbs, a U of C professor of astronomy and astrophysics. "We are uniquely suited for this work because we have the old photographs taken here. Like wine, they get better with age. We can compare them with pictures we take now."

Another advantage of the refractor is stability. Its lenses need not be removed for cleaning. Reflecting telescopes, which use mirrors, must be realuminized periodically, increasing the risk of slight changes in the optical alignment when they are reassembled.

Aberrations also are caused by air currents — a phenomenon astronomers call "bad seeing," which can occur even on clear nights.

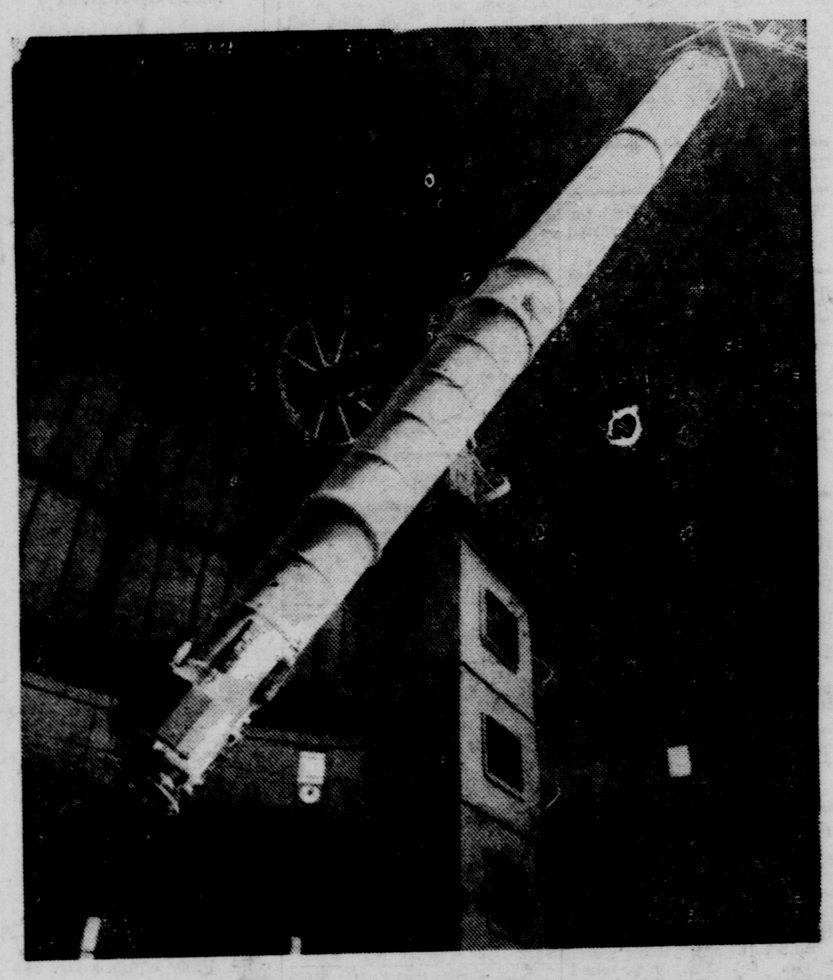

Thus, to limit distortion, the dome housing the telescope is never heated.

WORKING THIS shift in the dark can be a humbling experience, especially wheen it's 40 below, Hobbs said.

But, he said, "I can't tell you what a privilege it is to work here. The list of astronomers who have reads like an honor roll of American astronomy.

"For a long time astronomy was a very small field. The Yerkes, Lick (on Mt. Hamilton, Calif.) and Harvard College observatories were the pillars of American astronomy."

Yerkes was built in 1895, partly because Chicagoan George Ellery Hale had become frustrated trying to study the sun with his 12-inch telescope. With the help of William Rainey Harper, UC's first president, Hale drew up plans for the refractor, which was financed by Chicago businessman Charles Yerkes.

THE 80-YEAR-OLD telescope at the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., is the largest refracting-light-bending-telescope in the world.

'The system broke down'

Shooting victim battles crime

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Merrill Anderson, a lobbyist and businessman, was working late one cold January night in 1970. A young man knocked at the door and pointed a gun at him.

The gunman tried to rob Anderson but panicked and shot him in the stomach and back.

After his recovery, Anderson was prompted by the terrorizing experience to seek a new life. Now, he works for a "better system" to help people avoid getting into crime, rehabilitate those who do and aid victims of crimes.

ANDERSON, 40, is executive director of the National Foundation for Community Justice, Inc., an umbrealla group for three other organizations devoted to steering people to a better life.

Before the shooting, Anderson managed a driving school and a small manufacturing company. He also was a lobbyist for an outdoor advertising association and he had run for alderman and state legislator.

He wasn't surprised when someone knocked at his door at 1:30 a.m. "Our door had always been open."

The young man told him his car had stalled and asked to use the phone. Anderson agreed but as he went back to his papers he heard a click, looked up and saw the gun.

ANDERSON, ANXIOUS about his wife and three children sleeping upstairs, told the man he had little cash in the house but could write a check and cash it at a nearby restaurant. In the car, he said, he kept thinking about how he could get the gun and the young man apparently sensed it.

"He got out of the car screaming he was going to kill me and pulled the trigger three times. One bullet missed but a second hit me in the arm and another in the stomach and spine."

Anderson managed to drive to a hospital. Then came a few rough months, with no strength, no job, no income.

A 17-year-old suspect was arrested but went free after the defense argued Anderson, in shock, couldn't really recognize the youth. The suspect now is serving two consecutive life sentences for other crimes.

Lum and Abner live on at Pine Ridge museum

by PAUL F. PARSONS

PINE RIDGE, Ark. (UPI) — Inside the weather-beaten old store, Dorothy McClure happily spends her days with the voices and memorabilia of Lum Edwards, Abner Peabody, Grandpappy Spears and Sister Simpson.

There's the checkerboard precariously balanced on a wooden crate between two cane-bottomed chairs. There's the pot-bellied stove. Horse collars. Homemade sorghum.

It was Dick Huddleston's Store in tiny Pine Ridge, population 22, that gave inspiration to two young men growing up nearby — Chester Lauck (Lum) and Norris Goff (Abner). As Lum and Abner, they entertained millions with colorful tales of country life during the radio days of the 1930s and 1940s.

DOROTHY McCLURE IS the proprietor of Dick Huddleston's Store and its next-door neighbor, the Lum and Abner Museum.

On a trip in 1968, she and her late husband Ralph passed through Pine Ridge, nestled in the foothills of the Quachita Mountains, and stopped at the store, the original model for Lum and Abner's famous "Jot 'em Down Store."

"We fell in love with the store and bought it, immediately went back home to California to pack, and we moved to Pine Ridge," said Mrs. McClure, who admits to being a nostalgia buff. "Our friends in California thought we had lost our minds."

Her husband, a retired Fresno, Calif., door manufacturer, died in 1972 but Mrs. McClure keeps the Lum and Abner Museum open and growing.

"WHY, WE FILLED two large notebooks with guests to the museum last year," she said. "We had someone from every state and from five foreign countries."

She said she doesn't keep a head count because she lets busloads of senior citizens skip the 50 cent admission charge.

"I like listening to the senior citizens reminisce about how they used to share an earphone with someone who had a radio and listen to Lum and Abner," she said.

She likes listening to the children, too.

"CHILDREN 8 TO 16 years of age are very, very interested," she said. "A lot of times their parents don't go through the museum and the children will spend an hour in there. Just all of them have heard Lum and Abner."

Reruns of the old series still are heard on 107 stations nationwide.

Today, Chester Lauck is a popular public speaker when he isn't enjoying retirement in Hot Springs, Ark. Norris Goff plays a lot of golf at his retirement community of Indian Wells, Calif.

"Chester comes all the time. He was here last year," said Mrs. McClure. "But it's been a long time since Norris was here. Maybe we can get him to come this summer."

80-year old U of C telescope still reads 'fine print' in the sky

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis. (UPI) — If scientific technology is impatient and heartless, an 80-year telescope should be outmoded.

But the great refractor at the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory is not some senile relic, unable to read the fine print of the night sky.

Instead, like some crazed collegian cramming for exams, the iron leviathan still attracts the all-nighters at the drop of the sun.

NEXT TO YERKES' two modern reflecting telescopes, the 63-foot long, 20-ton veteran seems an anachronism. Yet, its two 40-inch lenses make it the largest refracting — light-bending — telescope in the world.

Reflecting telescopes of comparable power are smaller, cheaper and able to receive images not broken into colors as they are by going through glass lenses. The refractor, however, played a part in the major discovery in 1952 that our galaxy has a spiral structure.

Now it is devoted to determining fundamental distances to all nearby stars, others that are physically interesting and monitoring star motions.

Results are published in journals to allow other observatories a chance to check the figures.

"WE ARE ONE of three or four observatories in the world doing this," said Yerkes director L. M. Hobbs, a U of C professor of astronomy and astrophysics. "We are uniquely suited for this work because we have the old photographs taken here. Like wine, they get better with age. We can compare them with pictures we take now."

Another advantage of the refractor is stability. Its lenses need not be removed for cleaning. Reflecting telescopes, which use mirrors, must be realuminized periodically, increasing the risk of slight changes in the optical alignment when they are reassembled.

Aberrations also are caused by air currents — a phenomenon astronomers call "bad seeing," which can occur even on clear nights.

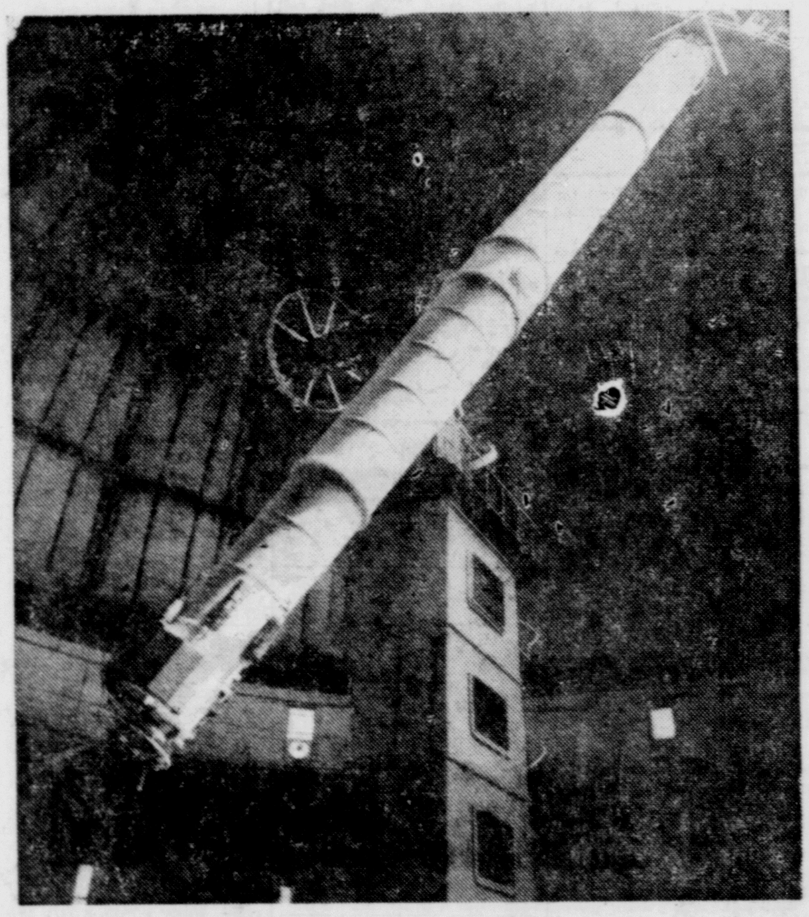

Thus, to limit distortion, the dome housing the telescope is never heated.

WORKING THIS shift in the dark can be a humbling experience, especially wheen it's 40 below, Hobbs said.

But, he said, "I can't tell you what a privilege it is to work here. The list of astronomers who have reads like an honor roll of American astronomy.

"For a long time astronomy was a very small field. The Yerkes, Lick (on Mt. Hamilton, Calif.) and Harvard College observatories were the pillars of American astronomy."

Yerkes was built in 1895, partly because Chicagoan George Ellery Hale had become frustrated trying to study the sun with his 12-inch telescope. With the help of William Rainey Harper, UC's first president, Hale drew up plans for the refractor, which was financed by Chicago businessman Charles Yerkes.

THE 80-YEAR-OLD telescope at the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., is the largest refracting-light-bending-telescope in the world.

'The system broke down'

Shooting victim battles crime

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Merrill Anderson, a lobbyist and businessman, was working late one cold January night in 1970. A young man knocked at the door and pointed a gun at him.

The gunman tried to rob Anderson but panicked and shot him in the stomach and back.

After his recovery, Anderson was prompted by the terrorizing experience to seek a new life. Now, he works for a "better system" to help people avoid getting into crime, rehabilitate those who do and aid victims of crimes.

ANDERSON, 40, is executive director of the National Foundation for Community Justice, Inc., an umbrealla group for three other organizations devoted to steering people to a better life.

Before the shooting, Anderson managed a driving school and a small manufacturing company. He also was a lobbyist for an outdoor advertising association and he had run for alderman and state legislator.

He wasn't surprised when someone knocked at his door at 1:30 a.m. "Our door had always been open."

The young man told him his car had stalled and asked to use the phone. Anderson agreed but as he went back to his papers he heard a click, looked up and saw the gun.

ANDERSON, ANXIOUS about his wife and three children sleeping upstairs, told the man he had little cash in the house but could write a check and cash it at a nearby restaurant. In the car, he said, he kept thinking about how he could get the gun and the young man apparently sensed it.

"He got out of the car screaming he was going to kill me and pulled the trigger three times. One bullet missed but a second hit me in the arm and another in the stomach and spine."

Anderson managed to drive to a hospital. Then came a few rough months, with no strength, no job, no income.

A 17-year-old suspect was arrested but went free after the defense argued Anderson, in shock, couldn't really recognize the youth. The suspect now is serving two consecutive life sentences for other crimes.
